ANDREWS MAY LEAVE WITH HAYNES

MELLON CONSIDERS DRASTIC CHANGE IN PROHIBITION ARMY

New Leadership May
Come In Interests Of Harmony

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Resentment, dissatisfaction and uncertainty swept through the federal prohibition army today with the report that Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has under consideration drastic changes in the interests of harmony.

Two years of friction between General Lincoln C. Andrews, assistant secretary, and Major Roy A. Haynes, the present acting commissioner threatens to culminate in the retirement of both from office.

Despite the reiteration of the often repeated statement at Andrews' office that he "has no thought of resigning" it was stated on good authority that the dry czar has informed Secretary Mellon that he is willing to turn the job over to a successor at any time.

Seymour Lowman, former lieutenant governor of New York, who was mentioned as a possibility for prohibition commissioner today was being boomed for Andrews' job. Lowman is a dry and probably would have Anti-Saloon League backing, in contrast to Andrews, a liberal, according to the dry forces.

Falling to obtain the commission for Haynes, the Anti-Saloon League apparently has turned its guns on Andrews. Mellon was understood to be considerably nettled over the almost constant turmoil that has existed in prohibition "GHQ" for many months. "Getting prohibition out of politics," poison liquor, the medicinal supply, detective story methods of undercover agents, "bridge club" traps, and intrigues to "get" Haynes are held up by the wets as making a farce comedy out of the American drying up process.

The administration, it was understood, is anxious to substitute a less spectacular conduct of affairs, although Mellon declared that he was well satisfied with the progress made by General Andrews toward enforcement.

Mellon was expected to talk the situation over with President Coolidge today, after which there was a probability that the treasury would announce the appointment of the new prohibition commissioner.

Aside from declaring that Dr. James M. Doran, chief chemist of the prohibition service, was "under serious consideration" for the commission, Mellon so far has declined to discuss the appointment.

The Anti-Saloon League today delivered to President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon a demand that the new dry regime set up by the reorganization act of the last congress, be made virtually an independent arm of the government.

Tokio is aware of the United States' general hope of applying the 5-5-3 capitalship ratio of the Washington conference to cruisers, destroyers, submarines and other secondary vessels, but the Japanese understand that America, at Geneva in June, will not seek adoption of any program based on advance.

"Our government, in other words, will not this time spring any 'Hughes bombshell' like the one which opened proceedings at Washington in November, 1921.

The importance Japan attaches to the conference is attested by the caliber and size of the delegation she is sending to it.

Viscount Saito, chief of the delegation, is an "elder statesman" approaching 70 and one of Japan's astute leaders.

Although now governor-general of Korea, Saito is a naval man by profession, having retired from active service as a vice admiral.

As a young officer Saito saw duty in the United States thirty-five or forty years ago. Viscount Ishii, now ambassador at Paris, is the senior member of the Japanese diplomatic service. He is well

THE G. A. R. PASSES BY--

The straggling remnants of the Hosts that went forth from Greene County to fight for the union during the War of the Rebellion have surrendered to the march of time.

For the first time in the valiant careers of these brave men who answered the call to arms sixty-six years ago that a united nation might be maintained, they are showing the white flag.

Where Minnie balls of an aroused South could not stop them, the sweeping scythe of Father Time has earned a capitulation. Unable to carry on the responsibilities of the annual Memorial Day program longer, they are passing the standard to younger hands.

Members of Lewis Post, Grand Army of the Republic, told members of the Memorial Day committee at its meeting at the Court House Thursday night, that it is relinquishing the duties of Memorial Day observance in the future. A resolution passed by the post recently, and signed by Albert Burrell, commander and J. W. Hedges, adjutant, made known the decision of the twenty or so surviving heroes.

This year's Memorial Day observance therefore, will be the swan song for the post. Next year they will see the responsibility fall upon the shoulders of the Women's Relief Corps and the American Legion. For Mr. Hedges, post adjutant, who has been active in the affairs of the post since it was formed, next year's observance will be the first in fifty years in which he will not have played a prominent part. The resolution adopted by the post follows:

"BE IT RESOLVED:
"By reason of advanced age and fewness of number, that we as a Post are unable to take an active part in the arrangements for Memorial Day services after this year as we have been doing for the past fifty years.

"Further, that all future arrangements for Memorial Day services be transferred to the Woman's Relief Corps No. 29 and The Joseph P. Foody Post, No. 95, of the American Legion and that the said organizations take it upon themselves to make all necessary and suitable arrangements for this sacred occasion."

The resolution is signed by Mr. Burrell and Mr. Hedges.

STREITENBERGER MUST SPEND EVERY JULY 16 IN SOLITARY

Former Canton Detective Sentenced To Life In Pen For Murder Of Publisher—Will
Not "Squawk"

CANTON, O., May 20.—"Life imprisonment in the Ohio state penitentiary, with solitary confinement each July 16," was the sentence pronounced today by Judge Cleveland upon Floyd E. Streitenberger, former Canton detective, third man convicted of first degree murder in connection with the conspiracy which resulted in the assassination of Don Mellet, Canton Daily News publisher, who was shot and killed here July 16, 1926.

Streitenberger's motion for a new trial was overruled and his sentence made more binding than either that of Patrick Eugene McDermott, or Ben Rudner, sentenced to life terms, ahead of him, for their complicity in the crime.

The ex-detective had regained his composure and seemed in fair spirits this morning. There was nothing so far to indicate that he had any intention of "squawking," as has been rumored. If Streitenberger has anything to tell which might further repudiate parts of the confession made by Louis Mazer, state's star witness, during his trial, he was not yet ready to let it out.

Mazer, Canton bootlegger, jointly indicted in the Mellet death plot, will probably be allowed to plead to manslaughter charge, sometime today, it was said. His sentence is expected to be fairly light. Streitenberger will probably be taken to Columbus Saturday.

REPORT LINDBERGH SIGHTED OFF COAST

BOSTON, May 20.—Government and private radio stations along the coast of New England combed the sea by air in vain all the forenoon today for a trace of the monoplane "The Spirit of St. Louis," carrying the intrepid Captain Charles A. Lindbergh on a New York to Paris hop.

Watchers along the New England coast sent in three reports—that Lindbergh was over Barrington, R. I., at 9:50 a. m., that a short time later he was over Hallowell, a village near historic Plymouth, landing place of the pilgrims, and again that he was climbing the fog banks over Mynot's lighthouse in Massachusetts Bay.

Government officials, however, thought that the plane over Narragansett Bay came from the war game maneuvers at Newport and that the second was one of the planes sent up from the Boston airport to scout the "Flying Fool."

EXPLOSIVES IN RESERVE

Still more disastrous might have been the result of the Bath school house explosion had this lot of dynamite been touched off. After the explosion these extra sticks were found, untouched, in the schoolhouse basement.

AIRPLANE WRECKAGE FOUND IS NOT PART OF NUNGESSER PLANE

WASHINGTON, May 20.—The piece of airplane wreckage picked up off the north Atlantic coast and towed into New London is not a part of Capt. Charles Nungesser's missing trans-ocean "White Bird," in the opinion of U. S. coast guard officials, expressed here today after a lengthy telephone report had been received on it from Capt. H. G. Hamlet, commanding the coast guard's destroyer force at New London.

The wreckage, instead of being a wing as reported, was a rectangular piece of fuselage, some twenty feet long and of a silver coloring. The marks consisted of a large letter "A" with a perpendicular line running from the upper part of the "A." Below this letter was another smaller letter "A" coupled with the numerals "49" and making "A-49." These letter markings were cut into the framework of the wreckage.

"This wouldn't appear to be Nungesser's plane," said one official. "More likely it is a part of the wreckage of some run-running plane."

The wreckage was found floating in the water between Block Island and Montauk Point.

Further investigation will be pursued, however.

FLOODS FOLLOW ON HEELS OF CYCLONE

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 20.—The western part of Indianapolis which escaped the fury of Wednesday's cyclonic winds, today faced a serious flood threat as the result of a fifteen foot break in the White River levee at Warfield.

So serious became the situation this morning three companies of Indiana national guardsmen were ordered out to combat the raging waters with sandbags. In addition hundreds of volunteers answered radio appeals and reinforced a large number of police officers and firemen.

Reports here stated the dam at Noblesville was opened to prevent its collapse.

The White River today continued rising at the rate of nine inches an hour.

"FLYING FOOL" OFF EARLY BRAVING FOG AND ATLANTIC RAINS

"Daredevil" Makes Faulty Take-Off But Develops
Great Speed—Hopes To Reach Paris Sunday
—Is Reported Seen

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., May 20.—Braving the perils of rain storms and fog over the North Atlantic, Captain Charles A. Lindbergh, the young, dare-devil American aviator, hopped off on the 3,600 mile, non-stop, trans-ocean flight for Paris this morning in his Ryan monoplane "Spirit of St. Louis." Lindbergh took the air at 7:52 o'clock.

Flying alone and carrying only sandwiches, a few chocolate bars and some distilled water, Lindbergh departed in misty weather. Rain earlier in the night had ceased at 4 o'clock.

His machine had been brought here from its hangar at Curtiss flying field at 4:30 o'clock in order to take advantage of the specially prepared runway nine-tenths of a mile in length.

The "Flying Fool" traveled almost a mile, nine-tenths to be exact, before his plane rose from the ground. He flew very low, and passed out of sight of the thousands of watchers at the field at an altitude of only 200 feet.

The first of the men who for days have been waiting for good weather to make the hop off on the long 3,600 mile flight headed straight east as he took to the air. The young pilot of the "Spirit of St. Louis" had planned to circle the field three times as a final engine test before starting out on his lone flight, but he evidently changed his mind after leaving the ground, and decided to be on his way without any more delay.

Commander Richard Byrd, who plans to hop off soon in his giant Fokker on the similar expedition, waved good-bye to the young St. Louisian.

"Good luck, old man," he shouted, "I'll see you in Paris."

Lindbergh only grinned.

A great cheer rose from the packed thousands of watchers on the field, who were held back by heavy police detachments as the silver colored plane, glinting in the faint sun which shone through a fast

AMERICAN VESSELS REQUESTED TO KEEP LOOKOUT FOR FLYER

Shipping Lines Are Dotted With Ships Board
Says

WASHINGTON, May 20.—News that Charles Lindbergh, the lone wolf among the trans-ocean flyers, was at last on his way to Paris on a non-stop flight thrilled official Washington today to a state of watchful expectancy and co-operation.

The Atlantic shipping lanes are dotted with U. S. shipping board vessels, and instructions immediately were issued for all ships to maintain a lookout for the daring young pilot and render assistance if any is needed. Similar orders have been issued to navy vessels, although most navy ships are off Newport engaged in the annual maneuvers.

Shipping board vessels of one type or another are scattered across the Atlantic approximately every sixty miles, according to shipping board officials.

If the weather in mid-ocean is clear this fact would afford a considerable measure of safety, but if the weather is foggy or Lindbergh should be forced down at night his rescue would be largely a hit-or-miss affair.

Instructions were broadcast today to all coast guard vessels on icebergs patrol to watch for Lindbergh.

At 10 o'clock this morning, Admiral Eberle, chief of naval operations, broadcast the following message to all navy ships in the Atlantic:

"Pilot Lindbergh in land plane 'Spirit of St. Louis,' single engine monoplane, departed on Great Circle course for Land's End, England, and Paris, at 6:52 a. m. New York time. Plane not equipped with radio. Request any ships sighting the plane to report that fact."

Naval flying experts were loud in their praise of Lindbergh's daring, but they were frankly pessimistic over his chances for success.

"But he can't take off at that speed, he's going too slow," yelled a mechanic. "Why doesn't he stop?"

Lindbergh was on his way, however, and nothing was going to prevent him from continuing. The silver monoplane bumped along, bouncing on the bumpy runway as it picked up, and it was almost a mile down the field that it finally got into the air.

A few moments later nothing was left, the plane having swiftly sped into the mists, straight out toward Montauk Point and the long lonely miles of the Atlantic.

For a few minutes the roar of the engine could be heard, and then there was nothing. "Daredevil!" Lindbergh was truly on his way.

"The kid" attained a speed that other aviators described as "phenomenal" soon after taking off. One of the newspaper planes capable of traveling 105 miles an hour was soon left far behind. Even before leaving the ground Lindbergh accelerated his engine to an unusual degree, and "bumped" on the muddy field several times before finally taking to the air.

AGREEMENT ON WAR CLAIMS OF BRITISH MADE

United States And Britain Reach Settlement

LONDON, May 20.—The United States and Great Britain have exchanged notes effecting a complete settlement of war claims, it was announced today.

The settlement provides for no cash payments, the claims almost equally cancelling, it is understood.

The British claims were mainly for salvage and supplies to ships and armed forces.

Downing Street considers the settlement satisfactory.

Discussion is now in progress with Washington relative to publication of the notes.

FREIGHTER GOES ON GROUND WITH CREW

SAN FRANCISCO, May 20.—With water rapidly filling the after hold, twenty-five members of the crew of the grounded Indiana Harbor were in peril of their lives today.

The freighter, bound from San Francisco to Portland, Ore., went aground on Point Gorda, 180 miles north of here. Hope of saving the vessel has been abandoned.

Three vessels, standing by, have so far been unsuccessful in attempts to rescue the crew. Wind and waves prevented use of breeches buoys or the launching of life boats.

In 24 to 48 Hours Pains Are Often Relieved and You Can Get Rest and Comfort Again.

Torturing pains—the kind that pierce and burn and never seem to let up—that rob a man of his sleep—that make him just a bag of nerves and all worn out.

These are the pains that dope and coal tar products can only partially relieve.

The safest and most efficient way to get rid of the persistent, nerve-racking pains of Neuritis is to get a bottle of Allenru Special Formula No. 2. Be sure you get No. 2, which comes in capsule form. Take these little dark green capsules as directed and in about 24 hours you should be able to notice that they have considerably reduced if not almost banished those severe, torturing pains that have caused you so many sleepless nights. Continue for two or three days more or until you are satisfied with results.

It doesn't matter how long you may have suffered or whether your Neuritis is in the shoulder, arm, neck or legs. Allenru Special Formula No. 2 should give you speedy relief. Sayre's Drug Store or any good drugist will be glad to supply you.

NOTED COMPOSER OF CHURCH MUSIC DIES AT MONMOUTH, ILL.

Word was received Thursday by Mrs. W. B. Bryson, Clifton Pike, of the death Thursday in Monmouth, Ill., of her brother-in-law, Dr. John B. Herbert, about 75, noted writer of church music and especially prominent in the United Presbyterian Church for his musical settings of psalms.

Death followed a short illness. Dr. Herbert was the writer of many psalm anthems and the anthem book, "The Harp of David." Among the technical works of which he was the author, "How to Write an Accompaniment," received international as well as national attention.

He was born in Guernsey County, Ohio, although he spent practically his entire life in Monmouth, Ill., where funeral services and burial are to be made Monday afternoon. Surviving is his widow, formerly Miss Fannie Graham, this city, sister of Mrs. Bryson, and who is well known in this vicinity.

Dr. Herbert was head of the Monmouth College Conservatory of Music for several years and received the degree of doctor of music from that institution. He was also a member of the Winona Music School faculty for several years and conducted music normal schools in Texas and Arkansas during the winter months in the past few years.

He was choir leader of the Second United Presbyterian Church of Monmouth for a time and later became music leader at the Third U. P. Church of Monmouth. As a publisher of music, Dr. Herbert was associated with Homer Rodeheaver, Billy Sunday's song leader, and together, they had recently published a psalter-hymnal for use of the United Presbyterian Church.

The only way we know how to save money is to keep so busy earning it that we haven't time to spend it.

We were very fortunate the other day when we were privileged to go through the Ubiko Milling Co.'s plant at "Cincy."

No wonder Union Grains are so successful as a Dairy Feed. It is clean and wholesome. It has the best of ingredients in it and while in the mill a constant aroma similar to Malted Milk pervades everywhere. And that isn't all! The other feeds, such as Ubiko Chick Starter are just as clean and wholesome even to the Cod Liver Oil.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monmouth, Ill., a practicing physician for forty-seven years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even if the child is chronically constipated.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel move-

BIBLE THOUGHT

MY HELP—I am poor and needy; yet the Lord thinketh upon me; thou art my help and my deliverer; make no tarrying, O my God. Psalm 40:17.

"HANG ON TOO LONG"

The increased length of life is said to be worrying official Germany. It is feared the old age pensioners will become so numerous there will not be enough money to pay the pensions. The law provides a pension for all officials over sixty-five years, but recently the remarkable increase in the span of life has brought about a great increase in the number of pensioners.

It is claimed the German habit of taking a nap after dinner has helped to prolong life. This increase in the span of human life is not peculiar to Germany. It is general for the civilized nations. After-dinner naps may be responsible for it in Germany, but better living conditions and more intelligent attention to health and diet are responsible for most of it.

Some people are apprehensive that the increased span will result in so great an increase in population living at one time that there will not be enough food raised to feed them, but nature seems to have a way of adjusting matters of that kind, so why worry about that? The U. S. does not pension its old people, so we have no cause to worry on that account, although England might join Germany on that score.

PREDICTING THE FUTURE

That curious mental germ which impels people to cross every conceivable bridge before they come to it seems to seize an unfair proportion of its victims from among scientists.

Professor Albrecht Penck, world-famous authority on the ice ages, predicts that in 2227 A. D. the earth will have a population of eight billion and that famine will be continuous.

He may be right; he may be wrong. Certainly, not even a scientist can be sure. To carry forward through three centuries of unknown future computations based on the world's present food supply and consumption, soil area and methods of agriculture is enormously to overstep one's data.

Three centuries ago scientists predicted famines in the twentieth century. Except in time of war this century has been troubled more by food surpluses than by food shortages.

Transportation is now incomparably more rapid than was then foreseen. Food storage on a scale then undreamt of is now a fact. It is now possible to preserve foods for years by refrigeration and canning. Furthermore, new foods are being found and invented; crop yields per acre are increasing through use of fertilizers, scientific breeding and better cultivation, and the area of arable land is being increased.

The only safe prediction about the future of man is that no limit dare be set to what he and nature may do, independently and in co-operation. Within the next three hundred years man may be extracting his food directly from the sunlight or he waxing fat from canned atmosphere.

GETTING NEW IDEAS

A Chicago teacher of reading, Dr. Brunson, discovered in an investigation in Philadelphia, that only one out of seven people who were riding on the elevated cars at 5 a. m. was reading a newspaper. But at 8:15 a. m. six out of seven people were reading. As the 8:15 jobs would be considered on the whole more desirable than the 5 o'clock ones, it suggests that reading has a great deal to do with people's advance in life.

If people want to get ahead and secure advantages in the world, they have to read about what is going on. Ideas by which men and women can climb higher can be found in any newspaper.

Russian reds must be getting rather blue, with North and South China both kicking them out.

Formerly people felt a desire to get on in the world, but now the idea seems to be to get by.

How to Achieve Beauty

BLEACHES FOR THE NECK

I cannot leave the subject of the neck without taking into consideration its color. The neck seems to have a way of getting yellow and discolored more than any other part of the anatomy, and many a woman who has a nice clear, white skin on her face, whose hands are comely, has skin on her neck that looks like time-worn ivory.

Somehow the skin on the neck seems to possess a stubbornness about responding to the effects of bleaches, therefore the best way to keep ahead is to swear allegiance to the consistent use of bleaching creams. Almost any cream put on with warm water and scrubbed well into the skin of the neck with a brush that is not too stiff will have whitening effects, even on a neck that has become quite yellow.

You can also make a paste of almond meal by mixing it with witch hazel for bleaching purposes. Apply it to the neck, leave it on for about ten minutes, and then wash off with warm water.

Just now, when necks are emerging from fur collars, the majority of women will need to give heed to the suggestions I am making today, because most of the colored furs contain dyes and the constant rubbing against them is hard on the skin of the neck.

For the skin that is becoming lined as well as yellow, rub in frequently a good anti-wrinkle nourishing cream. If the lines are really deep, take the flesh between two fingers of one hand, stretching it slightly, and rub across it lightly with the fingers of the other hand, very much in the manner that you try to take the wrinkles out of tissue paper. If the wrinkles are the result of loss of flesh, a stubbornness to the neck with lanoline or cocoa butter that has been warmed.

If your neck has been badly neglected and allowed to yellow to a considerable degree I would suggest that you compound the following cream and apply it to your neck night and morning until you begin to see an improvement. This makes a good massage and bleaching cream that is both nourishing and astringent:

Glycerine, 2 1/2 ounces.
Mutton tallow, 1/2 pound.
Tincture of benzoin, 1 dram.
Spirits of camphor, 1/2 dram.
Orange flower water, 1/2 dram.
Russian Isinglass, 1 ounce.

A Constant Menace

KELLYGRAMS BY FRED C. KELLY

WHEN A MAN IS HONORED

In Washington, not long ago, I met an old acquaintance who had just been appointed to an important public office. His desk was banked with flowers and he was busy opening great stacks of congratulatory letters.

To all appearances he had arrived somewhere and was entitled to strut a little. When we were all alone, I asked him:

"How does it feel suddenly to become a person of importance?"

"You may be surprised to know," he replied, solemnly, "that this is about the most tragic day of my life."

I looked at him closely and saw that he meant exactly what he said. Of course I asked him to explain.

"What does all this mean?" he asked, disgustedly, with an inclusive wave of his hand at the spacious office, mahogany furniture, and expensive fixtures. "It means simply that I have been thrown off like a chunk of clay from the wheel of fortune and happened to alight at this spot. Here is an office that I had nothing to do with creating. I was appointed, but so much as a tribute to my ability in the line that will be required here, as because I chanced to be a friend of a politician who thought he was doing me a favor. If it were a little factory that I had built up from nothing and this were the main office I might feel proud. If this were the day on which I had succeeded in having published a book of poems—or in painting a good picture—anything at all, so long as it were creative—I might be elated. But all this fuss being made over me because I have taken a public office in which I feel scant interest—bah!"

And he was almost in tears. Then it dawned on me that there was a dramatic explanation of why so few office holders ever amount to much.

Too often a public office is a landing place for a misfit. Such ability as he has lay in the line of getting himself elected rather than accomplishing much afterward.

I remember a man in my native country who inherited a prosperous big farm. Because of his commanding lack of business sense, he ran through with his money in a few years and his farm passed into other hands. But he was an agreeable fellow.

Many Minds SIGNIFICANT SAYINGS OF THE DAY

"Hold together, pull together, without lawlessness or injustice, then the United States of the World will stand in the offing and set an example to the peoples of the world, not proudly, but as a shrine for emulation to all."—Rabbi Stephen S. Wise.

"There are many crimes more serious than murder, because they affect more people. The adulteration of foods with substances that undermine the health of many is a more serious crime than the murdering of a single individual."—Municipal Judge Stevens, Cleveland.

"I am against 'punishment' of any and every kind, for it is abhorrent, useless and inhuman. Punishment means the infliction of suffering in return for suffering caused. The exact fitting of the amount of inconvencence and misery to the criminal act that has been done calls for an omniscience which human beings do not possess."—Dr. Arthur Wakefield Slater.

"The nation cannot possess healthy children, in a full and complete degree and at the same time permit industry to employ children. We cannot have child health and child labor simultaneously."—William Green.

"The employment of children in industry is a curse to civilization. It is incompatible with child welfare and is a violation of natural and physical laws. We must surrender one or the other, children's health or children's labor. Which shall it be?"—William Green.

"If I live to be a hundred, a beautiful woman's face with the personality back of it, will mean just as much to me. A lovely woman companion, a glass of wine and a piece of cake would mean as much to me today as they did fifty years ago."—Chauncey Depew.

HALITOSIS? KILL IT!

Seven times in ten, Halitosis is due to a sour, gassy stomach, caused by intestinal stasis, or "Constipation." People with halitosis (unpleasant breath) are shunned, avoided, because they are like a "plague"—friends just can't endure being near such a person. Old and young, rich and poor, none escape if fermented food remains in the body more than 24 hours. Even if the bowels move daily, there is often a remainder of foul, decaying matter, that can only be removed with a thorough cleansing such as Blackburn's Cascara-Royal Pills produce. This sweet little pill is "Better than Castor Oil."

Its action is pleasant and prompt. Stomach, liver, spleen and intestines, all are benefited. The effect is so different from ordinary laxatives, salts, calomel, etc. A smooth, abundant action from the very first dose, soon rids you of all the disagreeable symptoms.

The whole family learn the value of Blackburn's Cascara-Royal Pills, 45 pills, 30 cts. at drug stores.

Keeping HEALTHY By Dr. A. F. Currier

ICHTHYOSIS

A. C. E.: Will any modern method of treatment check or relieve ichthyosis?

This peculiar disease derives its name from the scale-like formation of the cells of the outer layer of the skin and is due to an inherited tendency to the formation of these cells or scales in great abundance. They seem almost like a coat of mail, and when the slightest friction is used they are shed in great quantities like the scales of dandruff which fall from the scalp in eczema.

The skin in ichthyosis is wrinkled, harsh and dry, but in the less developed cases only its furrows and folds are thickened and scaly.

These scales are dark green in color, suggesting the skin of a fish or a snake. When the disease is well developed the slightest motion causes a clattering and rattling which is necessarily very mortifying to the person who is thus afflicted.

In addition to the furrows and folds of the skin, this condition may involve the joints and exterior surface of the body, even the entire body, though the palms of the hands, the soles of the feet, and the face are not often attacked.

It may be inherited by either males or females, and is said to be aggravated by hard physical labor.

It is uncommon in this country, and there are probably many dermatologists who have never seen a case of it; but in some countries it is quite prevalent.

Paraguay and the East Indian Islands are mentioned as places where it is not uncommon.

It may develop during fetal life, and I recall that the one case which I have ever seen was that of a newborn baby dead at birth.

But it may develop in the first or second year of life, reaching its maximum with the arrival of puberty and then remaining stationary.

Recovery from this disease is rare, if indeed it ever occurs, though it appears to have very little influence upon the general health.

As might be expected, mention on the part of those who have ichthyosis is restricted and painful and troublesome fissures form at the folds of the skin which it is difficult to cure.

About the only thing that can be done is to remove the scales when they are uncomfortably abundant, with warm baths or by causing free perspiration or by the use of soft soap or the tincture of green soap.

The skin should be kept as flexible as possible by rubbing it carefully and persistently with bland ointments like cosmo-line or lanoline or cold cream. The use of medicines internally has apparently been of no value whatever.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Reader—Am 48 and have had bile of the liver for about a year, with intense pain in the back and side. A doctor has given me several kinds of medicine, without any benefit. Your advice would be appreciated.

Answer—Judging from your letter I should think you had appendicitis or gall-stones and possibly both. At any rate it is not a matter that you can afford to tamper with and my earnest advice is that you consult a good surgeon and if he tells you an operation is necessary to have it performed.

Ask Dr. Currier that medical question that has been puzzling you. Confine your letter to fifty words and send stamped, addressed envelope for reply. He cannot, of course, make individual diagnoses, and he reserves the right to decide as to the propriety of queries.

JUNIOR HIGH TEAM LOSES TO YELLOW SPRINGS TEAM 6 TO 5

Playing on a water-soaked diamond, Central Junior High School was defeated by the Yellow Springs Junior nine 6 to 5 in a baseball game at Yellow Springs Thursday.

Fielding of both teams was considered good under the trying circumstances.

Beal hurled a strong game for Yellow Springs and Brewer and Smith hit well for the winners. Beal carried off batting honors for Central Juniors, collecting three hits in three times at bat for a perfect average. Cope, Michael, Ball and Spahr also played well.

The diamond was not of regulation size as the pitcher's box was located forty-five feet from home plate. Yellow Springs' lineup was also strengthened by the addition of three high school players.

A return game with Yellow Springs will be played in Xenia next Wednesday afternoon.

Yellow Springs lineup: Smith, c; Kennedy, 1b; Sculter, ss; Thompson, 2b; Dishi, 3b; Beal, p; Jacobs, lf; Chapman, cf; Brewer, rf.

Central Junior lineup: Huston, cf; Cope, 2b; Michael, ss; Bell, cf; Leach, p; Ball, 1b; Dinwiddie, 3b; LaMar, lf; Spahr, c.

Officers and members of the executive committee, meeting at the home of Charles O'Brien, N. King St., president of the organization, Thursday night, set Thursday night, June 23, as the tentative date for the annual banquet of the Central High School Alumni Association.

Another meeting will be held at the president's home Monday night at 8 o'clock to consummate further plans for the affair.

Preparations are being made to make this year's banquet the most successful in every way and in point of attendance, of any in the history of the association, and the date was set for late in June in order to be convenient for former students now attending colleges and universities.

Officers of the association are: Charles O'Brien, president; Miss Marjorie Flynn, vice-president; Miss Fay Ledbetter, secretary, and Norbert McCallister, treasurer.

Members of the executive committee include: Philip Frame, chairman; Mrs. Oren Ledbetter, Mrs. Carl Nybladh, Lawrence Whittington, William Horner and Miss Louise B. Shaffer.

HOOVER PREPARES SOUTH LOUISIANA FOR FLOODS

OPELOUSAS, La., May 20.—Secretary of Commerce Hoover moved around the southern edge of Louisiana's inland coast today to prepare the lower parishes of the state for the final devastating sweep of the Mississippi's history making orgy.

This French city with an Indian name has almost doubled its population during the last forty-eight hours as flood exiles from a hundred miles around have rushed to its sixty-foot elevation for safety from the unprecedented burden of the Mississippi, rolling into St. Martin Parish today with its eight foot blanket of blighted water.

To its normal population of approximately 5,000 there has been added since the evacuation warnings of State Relief Dictator John M. Parker forty-eight hours ago, a nomadic band of more than 4,000 more, with their cattle, swine and pough mules. The refugees are encamped in the khaki peaked mudroom city of the Red Cross. The cows, pigs, and mules are thriving on army hay along the ridge where the hinterland dips into the yellow muddy flood water already engulfing the countryside.

Other new camps have been established at St. Martinsville, Lafayette and Alexandria. Between 50,000 and 60,000 refugees have been received in eleven Louisiana

Since the Mississippi waters bored through the melted levees along the Bayou De Glaises last week. Between ten and thirteen thousand more are expected from St. Martin, Iberville, Iberia, Lafayette and St. Mary Parishes before the crest of the newly formed Mississippi channel through the Atchafalaya Basin passes into the Gulf of Mexico about June 1.

DAYTON AUTOIST IS HURT AT JAMESTOWN

George McVay, Dayton, is in Miami Valley Hospital, that city, with a fractured collar bone and internal injuries, received when the auto in which he and five other young Dayton people were occupants, ran over an embankment on Johnson's Hill, Washington Pike, east of Jamestown, Friday morning at 1 o'clock.

The other five occupants of the car, whose names could not be learned, were unhurt. The machine was completely demolished when the driver failed to make the turn while descending the hill at a fast rate of speed and crashed over the steep embankment.

Earl Glass, east of Jamestown, found the wrecked car, when he was returning home early Friday morning. McVay was removed to the offices of a Jamestown physician where he was given first-aid treatment and then taken to the hospital. He was delirious Friday and his condition was thought serious. Two other young men and three girls were the other occupants of the machine.

The essays must be terse, logical and constructive and must stress the need for greater care in approaching and passing over railroad crossings.

Essays are to be sent to J. C. Caviston, secretary of the safety section of the American Railway Association, at 30 Vesey St., New York City, by not later than June 1. Three persons of national reputation will be selected later as judges.

Under the plan, the class teachers in both grammar and high schools will select the best essay from their classes and transmit them to their principal, who will then select the best one from that school and send it to the superintendent of schools for the county or an equivalent officer. The county superintendent will then select the best essay written by a grammar student and the best one written by a high school student in his county and transmit them to the American Railway Association. Colleges may follow the same procedure, except that each college or university, through its proper officer, may select one essay and transmit direct to the association.

CEDARVILLE HOLDS COMMENCEMENT FOR HIGH SCHOOL CLASS

Twenty-three seniors of Cedarville High School, constituting the second largest graduating class in the history of the school, were awarded diplomas at the fifth annual commencement exercises at the Cedarville Opera House Thursday night.

The largest class in the school's history was graduated in 1924 when twenty-seven students comprised the senior class.

Walton B. Bliss, Columbus, assistant state superintendent of education, delivered the commencement address on the subject, "Undiscovered and Untrained Talent is a Community's Greatest Tragedy."

Diplomas were presented to the graduates by Supr. C. E. Oxy, of the high school.

The invocation was given by the Rev. S. M. Ingmire, pastor of the Cedarville Methodist Episcopal Church with the benediction delivered by the Rev. W. P. Harman, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Cedarville.

Music for the exercises was furnished by the M. E. Church Sunday School orchestra.

List of graduates follows: Norman Wilson, class president; Norman Creaswell, vice-president; Grace Winal, secretary; Mary Elizabeth Smith, treasurer; Anna Printz, Sarah Rumbaugh, Eva Black, Frances Stover, Susannah West, Freda Estle, Isabel Webster, Esther Bookman, Christine Rice, Anna Peterson, Reva Milton, Mildred Jackson, Stephen St. John, Robert Horney, Greer McCallister, Malcolm Finney, Earl Telstrom, Lewis Fitzwater and Robert Jackson.

The meeting will be held all day, with a business meeting in the morning, a basket dinner at noon and the program in the afternoon.

Miss May McKay, New Burlington, was recently elected May Queen by students of Cedarville College and will be crowned June 1 during the annual Cedar Day exercises on the college campus.

Miss McKay, a senior at Cedarville, was editor of the "Cedarus," college annual publication and was a member of the college girls' basketball team, aside from taking an active part in school activities.

Miss Lena Hastings, teacher in the Springfield schools, was May Queen last year.

Details of the Cedar Day exercises have not been completed but are already being arranged.

G. C. Clark, Dayton, arrested with Rice in Osborn Thursday by Constable Sidney Cornelius, Osborn, pleaded not guilty to a charge of intoxication and his trial was fixed for May 27 by the court.

Rice's erratic driving of an automobile attracted the constable's attention, the Dayton man blaming his condition on nervousness for which he had taken a few drinks of corn whiskey as a stimulant.

Under the plan, the class teachers in both grammar and high schools will select the best essay from their classes and transmit them to their principal, who will then select the best one from that school and send it to the superintendent of schools for the county or an equivalent officer. The county superintendent will then select the best essay written by a grammar student and the best one written by a high school student in his county and transmit them to the American Railway Association. "WE'LL LAUGH THAT OFF" SAYS EMMA AS ANGRY REAL ESTATE OPERATOR ATTACKS SORORITY

By FREDERICK EDWARDS
There are smiles that make us happy.
There are smiles that make us blue.

Not-so-very-old song.
Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright, 1927
EMPHORIA, Kan., May 20.—This may be William Allen White's home town, but Emma Jensen lives here too, and at the moment the simple philosophy of Emma Jensen is being more spoken of in the market places than the profounder sonorous of Emporia's pet sage.

I don't think that Emma Jensen favored the saying, "The voice with the smile wins," but at least she believes in it. She believes that a policy of smiling sweetly in the face of militant adversity will make the T. B. Godsey into a real nice neighbor for the Alpha Sigma Alpha sorority of the State Teachers' college.

It is my personal conviction that greater faith had no woman than this.

T. B. Godsey is a realtor. He owns his own home, which is quite proper. Realtors, as well as other people, should practice what they preach.

Next door to T. B. Godsey's home is a large, nice house which is owned by the Alpha Sigma Alpha. It has rooms and porches, and everything. Quite a number of the Alpha Sigma Alphas live there; and Emma Jensen is their president.

Search of the records reveals no indication that T. B. Godsey is a woman hater. Probably he isn't. Miss Jensen advises in a letter to the belief that T. B. Godsey, beneath his rough exterior, has a heart of gold. Some of the other members of the Alpha Sigma Alpha are not so sure. Recent experiments have been known to refer to T. B. Godsey as an old woman.

Mr. Godsey Advertiser.
It started last fall. Out of a clear sky, with no warning at all, there appeared an advertisement in William Allen White's Emporia Gazette over T. B. Godsey's business signature.

At first sight this was just another realtor's announcement of desirable properties to be had for a mere sum. For $2,200 you could get six rooms, modern; $5,500 buys a well-built eight-room house, and so on.

But, sprang in the middle of T. B. Godsey's announcement, duly paid by his advertising appropriation, was this paragraph:

"Wonder why? A bunch of honking, screeching, hugging, kissing, dancing, irresponsible kids buy a house in any part of town, call it a sorority or frat, hire a housemother (whatever that is), who generally sleeps in a corner, and get by without paying a cent of taxes. Why?"

There was consternation among the Alpha Sigma Alphas when that acid announcement appeared, let me tell you. Red fire was burned and war dances were pirouetted. Words were spoken. Harsh words. Alpha Sigma Alpha was all upset.

Screeching!!
Hugging!!!

MISS JENSEN'S SMILE IS WELL WORTH WHILE; THE PICTURE PROVES THAT TRUE. IF SHE WERE GLAD, WHEN YOU WERE MAD, WHAT WOULD THERE BE TO DO?

Kissings!!
"Is that nice?" asked Alpha Sigma Alpha. And Alpha Sigma Alpha answered "No".
Oil is Poured.

But the beautiful (look at the picture) Miss Jensen poured oil on the troubled waters. She's one of State Teachers' college's best oil pourers. She can pour more oil than John D. Rockefeller owns.

Of course the advertisement was aimed at Alpha Sigma Alpha, right next door to T. B. Godsey's home. "What of it?" asked Miss Jensen. "Let us forgive T. B. Godsey his wickedness and his heart will be softened and his disposition made sweet."

But it wasn't the next thing anyone knew T. B. Godsey had pounded a lot of stakes into the driveway between his house and happy medium when it comes to eggs. Hens are extremists, that's all there is to it.

Harsh Words, Neighbor.

Then just a few nights ago, while Alpha Sigma Alpha member Helen Hammond was saying "Goodnight" to Clayton Traylor, a college of Emporia senior who had escorted her home from the movies, T. B. Godsey went berserk again. He told Helen Hammond and Clayton Traylor to go away. Helen and Clayton were on the rear porch of the sorority house, when T. B. Godsey told them to go away. He told them several times and didn't repeat himself once.

Clayton Traylor is a man of spirit. He went to the police and charged T. B. Godsey with disturbing the peace, using bad language, and threatening him with a revolver.

"Peace!" said T. B. Godsey. "Peace! My sainted red-headed aunt's sacred blue Egyptian pussy-cat's waving, busy tail! Peace! There hasn't been as much peace as you could put in a mosquito's right eye since these honking, screeching, hugging, kissing girls moved in here."

Well, a charge is a charge, and things looked sort of bad. You

MRS. BASSETT ALWAYS TIRED

Now in Good Health by Using
Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lansing, Mich.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound whenever I needed it. When I first used it I was so bad I could hardly walk across the room without crying. I was tired all the time. I think my trouble was coming on me for six months before I realized it. I will read of your wonderful paper, and my husband bought me a bottle, and after the first few doses I felt better, so kept on taking it until I was well and strong. I take it at times when I feel tired and it helps me. I will always have a good word for your medicine and tell anyone what good it has done me. I recommended it to my neighbor for her girl, who is sixteen years old, and it was just what she needed. She is feeling fine now, and goes to school every day."

—Mrs. E. F. Bassett, 216 South Hayford Avenue, Lansing, Michigan.

Do not continue to feel all run-down and half sick when Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is sold by druggists everywhere.

FUN FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

The Rovin' Ritzies By Flo Frederick

How Betty Strings a Bead Is Advice That You Should Heed.
Betty Ann, the youngest member of the Ritzie club, had discovered a way to make rings and bracelets stay on her doll's fingers and wrists.

There were times when the girl members of the Ritzie club played with their dolls while the boys indulged in rougher games, and dashed about the yard on imaginary horses, flashing crude swords at each other. It would not have been hard to guess that they were the daring knights of old and that their shields were tin lids and ash can tops.

The girls were dressing their dolls when Betty Ann worked out the problem of jewelry. She is sure that many little girls would be glad to know how it can be done.

Of course, it wouldn't be proper for her to wear the jewelry every day anyway. If you haven't an old jewel box, any flat box with a hinge top will do. Line it with cotton and tuck your jewels away.

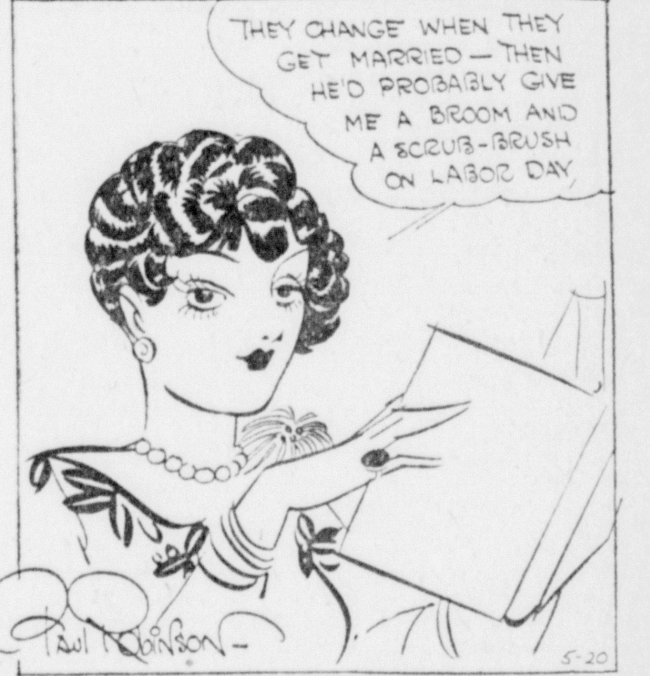

If you follow Betty Ann's suggestion and fit your dolly out with rings and bracelets, she will be the most envied doll in the whole neighborhood.

The girls had just packed their doll things away in their little wardrobe trunk when the boys came dashing into the carpenter shop still wearing their armor of wire through a pearl bead and twist the wire around the doll's finger so that the pearl stays on the outside. A jade bracelet of green beads can be made in the same way and twisted securely around your doll's wrist.

This is much more satisfactory than stringing the beads on thread because when wired they can be taken on and off so easily and, of course, if your doll is a lady of fashion she will have many rings and bracelets.

In selecting your wire, you must be sure that it is fine and easy to bend. If there isn't any in the tool chest, mother will very likely let you a fold of the green wire that is used in making paper flowers. This can be cut with an old wooden swords and tin lid shields.

Boys Break Up Doll Party.
"Forget about the dolls, girls," said Rag. We've got a peach of an idea for the club and we need your help. We'll make a Ritzie flag, hoist it over the shop end we'll never have any trouble defending it because we've practiced all morning and we're good knights."

"I'd like to see any of the neighborhood gang try to take it down," said Tag, brandishing his sword. It all sounded quite rough and terrible to the girls, but a meeting of the club was held and just what they planned to do about their flag will be told in tomorrow's story. Watch for it in The Evening Gazette and The Morning Republican.

known in Washington, where he was ambassador during the World War, and at Tokio is looked upon as an uncommonly shrewd international negotiator. Mr. Saburi, the secretary-general and virtually the third Japanese delegate, will bring to Geneva the valuable experience of service during the Washington armament conference and several subsequent years as counselor of the Japanese embassy here.

He is to contribute Japan's full share to the maintenance of world peace, but always with the frank assertion of the empire's military and naval requirements.

The Japanese "defense budget" for 1926 totaled $220,000,000. A little more than half was spent on the navy. Japanese taxes, as elsewhere, are burdensome. The government is constantly endeavoring to cut expenses and devote more money to constructive things. Recent Japanese financial disturbances have whetted statesmen's anxiety in those directions. But particularly under the new government now in power, with Baron Tanaka, a former general, as prime minister, defensive needs are assured of determined support, although Tanaka is not charged with militaristic tendencies.

Reluctant to Reduce

Semi-official Japanese utterances, since President Coolidge brought about the Geneva conference, have strongly indicated Japan's reluctance to reduce materially her present building program for cruisers, destroyers and submarines.

Having accepted capitulation to Great Britain and the United States, the Japanese are plainly disinclined to remain weaker in auxiliary ships. Responsible Japanese newspapers already are demanding that the Geneva conference place Japan and the United States on a level of equality in non-capital ships. They are calling for a 5-4 ratio, with Great Britain allowed the corresponding margin of superiority over her globe-girdling imperial naval needs.

Some idea of the Japanese reasoning now in progress is afforded by the following editorial comment from the important "Osaka Mainichi," which has just reached Washington:

U. S. Demands Attacked
The implied intention of the United States is to apply the 5-3 capital-ship ratio to subsidiary weapons. Japan and Great Britain object to this, unanimously insisting upon making the existing strength of their fleets their standards of national defense. For this reason it becomes necessary to work out a new ratio through adjustment of differences. The United States claims she should be allotted the same cruiser strength as the British, but this is not fair, because the British own vast possessions overseas. The coast lines of the United States are not so extensive as those of the British empire. We hold that the United States should be allowed cruisers in the ratio of only four as against five for Great Britain. This is an appropriate proportion. Japan is an island empire like the British Empire. We therefore claim the right to have cruiser strength on a scale of four to America's four. The new tripartite ratio as between Great Britain, Japan and the United States should be respectively, 5-4-4. If such a ratio is put in force, Great Britain and Japan will have to strike certain units from their lists, whereas the United States will be permitted to add 35,000 tons of new ships to her navy. This suggestion will likely afford a basis for a compromise at Geneva.

Franco-Italian Attitude

The Japanese are disturbed over the failure of France and Italy to join in the Geneva conference. They realize that if the French and Italians proceed to build cruisers and other light craft without limitation, the British would necessarily have to meet that competition. In the race thus precipitated, Japanese commentators are pointing out, their country and America sooner or later also would join. It's exactly that kind of a new and ruinous contest in naval armament that President Coolidge desires to avert.

Radio Law Has Wide Field

Orestes H. Caldwell, federal radio commissioner for the North Atlantic area, comes to the front with a novel idea. He suggests that the new radio law may be found to possess powers reaching far beyond its supposed jurisdiction. Addressing a church meeting in his home town at Bronxville, N. Y., the other night, Commissioner Caldwell intimated that the law dealing with radio interference might easily be construed to apply to purely local disturbances of all kinds. "If, for example," he said, "a householder here in Westchester County is listening to a radio program from New Jersey and an oil-burner in his neighbor's house starts up, ruining radio reception, that oil-burner is interfering with interstate commerce just as much as a distant radio station which was spoiling the same wave length. It was to eliminate interference that the radio law was passed. Sooner or later the federal authority is going to be brought into local interference situations, including sign-flashers, heating pads, toasters, violet-ray navigators, vacuum cleaners, and children's electric trains."

WHAT HAS HAPPENED:

Both Anne Tracy and Mr. Jones, who is the Tracy's milkman, object to the engagement of Philip Wynne Tracy IV and Natalie Jones. Philip's mother plans to interest her son in other girls and decides to give him a party. She tells him about the impending visit of her old friend, Mrs. Hillard, and unconsciously arouses his interest in the woman. He goes to the depot to meet her and finds her to be a woman. Shortly he finds he has fallen in love at first sight and wishes Natalie were not coming to the party.

After their first kiss, Philip only lives to be near Lyra.

At the party Natalie overhears Philip making love to Mrs. Hillard and breaks her engagement. She refuses to be even friends and tells Rodney Maxwell all about it. Rodney comforts Natalie by telling her that he loves her and will smash Phil's face, but she begs him to forgive Phil and stay friends with him through everything.

On a midnight ride Lyra confesses her love for Philip.

The next day Philip tells his mother that he is not going to college and sends Lyra a very passionate love poem which she finds. Lyra and Mrs. Tracy have it out. Lyra tells Anne she is not too old for romance. The whole affair, however, sinks into nothingness because war is declared.

Here the story further unfolds—

CHAPTER XX
PHILIP KEEPS UP THE TRADITION

It did not strike Anne Tracy that she was sacrilegious in her prayer. She was only a very human mother with human impulses.

The impulse first to save her boy from the devastating war of a woman who would make his life a living hell—and second—to in some way make the war go, think it was that he might see her boy apart and bid death to pass him by.

Her head was pounding—she could not breathe—but at last, in a torrent of sobs and tears, she confessed to herself that she would rather know that Philip was dead out there on the fields of France than realize that when asked to choose between her and Lyra, he would choose Lyra.

She lifted her head. Above the ominous noise of already war-crazed men a young voice was raised high over the crowd.

"Rod—oh Rod—come on—you know we promised to sign up together."

"All right, Wynne—I am with you."

Anne Tracy rushed to the window and looked out on the street. Through the gate of the house next door came the stolid form of Rodney Maxwell.

As he reached the car and swung himself in beside the boy at the wheel, he threw his arm around Phil's shoulder.

"All right, Buddy," he said, "let's go."

Sharply the shining blue roadster turned and drove away.

Anne Tracy drew back quickly as the dread thought struck her. She had not for a moment thought that Philip would enlist without first telling her.

She rushed back to the window and threw it up calling, "Philip! Philip!"

He did not hear her, for with honking horns and open cut-out he was racing down the street to the first recruiting station.

When she realized that he had forgotten her—that even now her anguish meant nothing to him, she felt her breath come faint.

Some time afterward her faithful Nannie found her underneath the open window, prone on the floor.

Lyra Hillard, from her window, had witnessed the little drama and her heart also missed a beat as she realized that she, too, was forgotten in this great thrill that made Philip Wynne Tracy IV look the very image of the American soldier as standing straight up in the roadster, his uncovered head bared to the breeze that lifted his dark brown hair, he drove down the avenue shouting, "Come on, boys—come on! America is at last going in, and we have to follow the flag!"

The afternoon papers made much of this incident, for the greatest weapon of all was already on the firing line.

War propaganda—thrilling appeals to one's patriotism and the intimation that only those who were yellow would stay behind.

As usual, it was Philip who impulsively and unthinkingly forged ahead through the ruck of men milling about the street, cheering, laughing, triumphant.

It was only within the closed doors of homes all over the land that white, fearless women moved unheeding of the country's jubilation, that whenever the American flag goes into battle there will be a Tracy following it.

Across a little figure was pressed against the old elm tree. So closely did the girl hug its rugged trunk that in her gray coat she looked like a part of it.

Her arms outstretched above her head were clutching, tearing at its bark.

"Rod, you are so good to me."

head were clutching, tearing at its bark.

Every few minutes a sharp exclamation would perhaps call the attention of some one of the excited passers-by, but even he would hardly notice that it was the clinging to the tree in anguish who spoke.

"Why doesn't Rod come?" It was very significant that even in this terrible crisis Natalie Jones was depending on Rod and not upon Philip.

Natalie knew that the excitement and thrill of a declared war had brushed every other thought out of Philip's mind. But she also was sure that Rod would remember her—he would not leave her for long without some word.

It seemed hours, but in reality the time was very short, before Rod was gently taking Natalie's arms down from above her head against the tree.

Then she burst into wild, dry sobs, that shook her whole frame.

"Rod—Philip's going?"

The very way she put her question showed that she expected no other answer than the howling head which told her yes. "We are both going, Natalie."

With the unconscious cruelty of a woman who is passionately in love with one man and knows that the other is in love with her, she exclaimed, "Oh, I am so glad."

For a moment the man beside her grew white and leaned against the tree.

Natalie hurried on: "I was going to ask you, Rod, dear, to go with Philip, but what you told me just now has made me know that I might have known that like the good friend you are, you would have thought of nothing except to be with him when danger came."

"You will take care of him, will you not? You know how I thought of him in love with her, she realized that she was doing to him. For a moment he was quite contemptuous of his weakness, for he had no illusions. Natalie Jones had sacrificed him all his life for Wynne and now she was sending him proudly to his death without a qualm because she thought he might save her lover from casual danger."

Then another thought struck her. "Why, it never occurred to me that neither Phil nor you are old enough to go. How did you get in, Rod?"

Natalie asked, a gleam of new courage coming into her eyes. "I hope you did not lie about your ages."

"No—Wynne is going to get his mother's consent."

"She will not give it. Surely, Rod, she cannot give it. Why, Philip is her only child."

"Wynne thinks she will consent, for she knows he is the only one in the family that can keep up the tradition that whenever the American flag goes into battle there will be a Tracy following it."

"I don't believe that will make any difference with her." Then, as an afterthought: "What about you, Rod? Why, you, yourself, are only a little over 17."

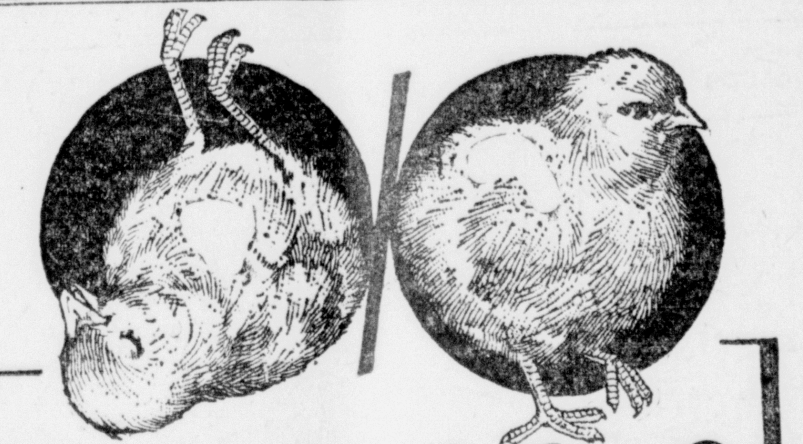

"Will Mrs. Tracy allow her son to enlist? Her attitude, and that of Mrs. Hillard, are told in the next installment."

"DAREDEVIL" OFF ON LONG TRIP

"LUCKY" LINDBERGH

WILE SAYS:

Now Nippon
Japs Worried
New Radio Law
Washington Notes

By FREDERICK WILLIAM WILE

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright 1927

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Sadao Saburi, secretary-general of the Japanese delegation to the impending Anglo-American-Japanese naval limitation conference at Geneva, has arrived in Washington en route to Switzerland. He brings assurances that Japan approaches the three-power meeting convened by President Coolidge "with sincerity and seriousness."

Japan will enter the conference in a spirit of readiness to give full and open-minded consideration to any feasible proposals for limitations of auxiliary naval craft.

Tokio is aware of the United States' general hope of applying the 5-5-3 capital ship ratio of the Washington conference to cruisers, destroyers, submarines and other secondary vessels, but the Japanese understand that America, at Geneva in June, will not seek adoption of any program fixed up in advance. Our government, in other words, will not this time spring any "Hughes bombshell" like the one which opened proceedings at Washington in November, 1921. At Geneva programs are to develop, the Japanese expect, as a result of discussion and demonstrated practicability from the various standpoints of the conferring powers.

Much Importance Attached
The importance Japan attaches to the conference is attested by the caliber and size of the delegation she is sending to it. Viscount Saito, chief of the delegation, is an "elder statesman" approaching 70 and one of Japan's astute leaders. Although now governor-general of Korea, Saito is a naval man by profession, having retired from active service as a vice admiral. As a young officer Saito saw duty in the United States thirty-five or forty years ago. Viscount Ishii, now ambassador at Paris, is the senior member of the Japanese diplomatic service. He is well

ANDREWS MAY LEAVE WITH HAYNES

MELLON CONSIDERS DRASTIC CHANGE IN PROHIBITION ARMY

New Leadership May
Come In Interests Of Harmony

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Resentment, dissatisfaction and uncertainty swept through the federal prohibition army today with the report that Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has under consideration drastic changes in the interests of harmony.

Two years of friction between General Lincoln C. Andrews, assistant secretary, and Major Roy A. Haynes, the present acting commissioner threatens to culminate in the retirement of both from office.

Despite the reiterated of the often repeated statement at Andrews' office that he "has no thought of resigning" it was stated on good authority that the dry czar has informed Secretary Mellon that he is willing to turn the job over to a successor at any time.

Seymour Lowman, former lieutenant-governor of New York, who was mentioned as a possibility for prohibition commissioner today was being boomed for Andrews' job. Lowman is a dry and probably would have Anti-Saloon League backing, in contrast to Andrews, a liberal, according to the dry forces.

Failing to obtain the commission for Haynes the Anti-Saloon League apparently has turned its guns on Andrews.

Mellon was understood to be considerably nettled over the almost constant turmoil that has existed in prohibition "GHQ" for many months. "Getting prohibition out of politics," poison liquor, the medicinal supply, detective story methods of undercover agents, "bridge club" traps, and intrigues to "get" Haynes are held up by the wets as making a farce comedy out of the American drying up process.

The administration, it was understood, is anxious to substitute a less spectacular conduct of affairs, although Mellon declared that he was well satisfied with the progress made by General Andrews toward enforcement.

Mellon was expected to talk the situation over with President Coolidge today, after which there was a probability that the treasury would announce the appointment of the new prohibition commissioner.

Aside from declaring that Dr. James M. Doran, chief chemist of the prohibition service, was "under serious consideration" for the commission, Mellon so far has declined to discuss the appointment.

The Anti-Saloon League today delivered to President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon a demand that the new dry regime set up by the reorganization act of the last congress, be made virtually an independent arm of the government.

AGREEMENT ON WAR CLAIMS OF BRITISH MADE

United States And Britain
Reach Settlement

LONDON, May 20.—The United States and Great Britain have exchanged notes affecting a complete settlement of war claims, it was announced today.

The settlement provides for no cash payments, the claims almost equally cancelling, it is understood.

The British claims were mainly for salvage and supplies to ships and armed forces.

Downing street considers the settlement satisfactory.

Discussion is now in progress with Washington relative to publication of the notes.

FREIGHTER GOES ON GROUND WITH CREW

SAN FRANCISCO, May 20.—With water rapidly filling the hold, twenty-five members of the crew of the grounded Indiana Harbor were in peril of their lives today.

The freighter, bound from San Francisco to Portland, Ore., went aground on Point Gorda, 180 miles north of here. Hope of saving the vessel has been abandoned.

Three vessels, standing by, have so far been unsuccessful in attempts to rescue the crew. Wind and waves prevented use of breeches buoys or the launching of life boats.

THE G. A. R. PASSES BY--

The straggling remnants of the hosts that went forth from Greene County to fight for the union during the War of the Rebellion have surrendered to the march of time.

For the first time in the valiant careers of these brave men who answered the call to arms sixty-six years ago that a united nation might be maintained, they are showing the white flag.

Where Minnie balls of an aroused South could not stop them, the sweeping scythe of Father Time has earned a capitulation. Unable to carry on the responsibilities of the annual Memorial Day program longer, they are passing the standard to younger hands.

Members of Lewis Post, Grand Army of the Republic, told members of the Memorial Day committee at its meeting at the Court House Thursday night, that it is relinquishing the duties of Memorial Day observance in the future. A resolution passed by the post recently, and signed by Albert Burrell, commander and J. W. Hedges, adjutant, made known the decision of the twenty or so surviving heroes.

This year's Memorial Day observance therefore, will be the swan song for the post. Next year they will see the responsibility fall upon the shoulders of the Women's Relief Corps and the American Legion. For Mr. Hedges, post adjutant, who has been active in the affairs of the post since it was formed, next year's observance will be the first in fifty years in which he will not have played a prominent part. The resolution adopted by the post follows:

"BE IT RESOLVED:
"By reason of advanced age and fewness of number, that we as a Post are unable to take an active part in the arrangements for Memorial Day services after this year as we have been doing for the past fifty years.

"Further: that all future arrangements for Memorial Day services be transferred to the Woman's Relief Corps No. 29 and The Joseph P. Foody Post, No. 95, of the American Legion and that the said organizations take it upon themselves to make all necessary and suitable arrangements for this sacred occasion."

The resolution is signed by Mr. Burrell and Mr. Hedges.

STREITENBERGER MUST SPEND EVERY JULY 16 IN SOLITARY

Former Canton Detective Sentenced To Life In Pen For Murder Of Publisher—Will
Not "Squawk"

CANTON, O., May 20.—"Life imprisonment in the Ohio state penitentiary, with solitary confinement each July 16," was the sentence pronounced today by Judge Cleveland upon Floyd E. Streitenberger, former Canton detective, third man convicted of first degree murder in connection with the conspiracy which resulted in the assassination of Don Mellett, Canton Daily News publisher, who was shot and killed here July 16, 1926.

Streitenberger's motion for a new trial was overruled and his sentence made more binding than either that of Patrick Eugene McDermott, or Ben Rudner, sentenced to life terms, ahead of him, for their complicity in the crime.

The ex-detective had regained his composure and seemed in fair spirits this morning. There was nothing so far to indicate that he had any intention of "squawking," as has been rumored. If Streitenberger has anything to tell which might further repudiate parts of the confession made by Louis Mazer, state's star witness, during his trial, he was not yet ready to let it out.

Mazer, Canton bootlegger, jointly indicted in the Mellett death plot, will probably be allowed to plead to manslaughter charge, sometime today, it was said. His sentence is expected to be fairly light. Streitenberger will probably be taken to Columbus Saturday.

REPORT LINDBERGH SIGHTED OFF COAST

BOSTON, May 20.—Government and private radio stations along the coast of New England combed the sea by air in vain all the forenoon today for a trace of the monoplane "The Spirit of St. Louis," carrying the intrepid Captain Charles A. Lindbergh on a New York to Paris hop.

Watchers along the New England coast sent in three reports—that Lindbergh was over Barrington, R. I., at 9:50 a. m., that a short time later he was over Fall River, a village near historic Plymouth, landing place of the pilgrims, and again that he was climbing the fog banks over Nantuxet's lighthouses in Massachusetts Bay.

Government officials, however, thought that the plane over Narragansett Bay came from the war game maneuvers at Newport and that the second was one of the planes sent up from the Boston airport to scout the "Flying Fool."

EXPLOSIVES IN RESERVE

Still more disastrous might have been the result of the Bath school-house explosion had this lot of dynamite been touched off. After the explosion these extra sticks were found, untouched, in the schoolhouse basement.

AIRPLANE WRECKAGE FOUND IS NOT PART OF NUNGESSER PLANE

WASHINGTON, May 20.—The piece of airplane wreckage picked up off the north Atlantic coast and towed into New London is not a part of Capt. Charles Nungesser's missing trans-ocean "White Bird," in the opinion of U. S. coast guard officials, expressed here today after a lengthy telephone report had been received on it from Capt. H. G. Hamlet, commanding the coast guard's destroyer force at New London.

The wreckage, instead of being a wing as reported, was a rectangular piece of fuselage, some twenty feet long and of a silver coloring. The marks consisted of a large letter "A" with a perpendicular line running from the upper part of the "A." Below this letter was another smaller letter "A" coupled with the numerals "49" and making "A-49." These letter markings were cut into the framework of the wreckage.

"This wouldn't appear to be Nungesser's plane," said one official. "More likely it is a part of the wreckage of some run-running plane."

The wreckage was found floating in the water between Block Island and Montauk Point.

Further investigation will be pursued, however.

FLOODS FOLLOW ON HEELS OF CYCLONE

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 20.—The western part of Indianapolis which escaped the fury of Wednesday's cyclonic winds today faced a serious flood threat as the result of a fifteen foot break in the White River levee at Warfleigh.

So serious became the situation this morning three companies of Indiana national guardsmen were ordered out to combat the raging waters with sandbags. In addition hundreds of volunteers answered radio appeals and reinforced a large number of police officers and firemen.

Reports here stated the dam at Noblesville was opened to prevent its collapse.

The White River today continued rising at the rate of nine inches an hour.

"FLYING FOOL" OFF EARLY BRAVING FOG AND ATLANTIC RAINS

"Daredevil" Makes Faulty Take-Off But Develops
Great Speed—Hopes To Reach Paris Sunday
—Is Reported Seen

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., May 20.—Braving the perils of rain storms and fog over the North Atlantic, Captain Charles A. Lindbergh, the young, dare-devil American aviator, hopped off on the 3,600 mile, non-stop, trans-ocean flight for Paris this morning in his Ryan monoplane "Spirit of St. Louis." Lindbergh took the air at 7:52 o'clock.

Flying alone and carrying only sandwiches, a few chocolate bars and some distilled water, Lindbergh departed in misty weather. Rain earlier in the night had ceased at 4 o'clock.

His machine had been brought here from its hangar at Curtiss flying field at 4:30 o'clock in order to take advantage of the specially prepared runway nine-tenths of a mile in length.

The "Flying Fool" traveled at most a mile, nine-tenths to be exact, before his plane rose from the ground. He flew very low, and passed out of sight of the thousands of watchers at the field at an altitude of only 200 feet.

The first of the men who for days have been waiting for good weather to make the hop off on the long 3,600 mile flight headed straight east as he took to the air. The young pilot of the "Spirit of St. Louis" had planned to circle the field three times as a final engine test before starting out on his lone flight, but he evidently changed his mind after leaving the ground, and decided to be on his way without any more delay.

Commander Richard Byrd, who plans to hop off soon in his giant Fokker on the similar expedition, waved good-bye to the young St. Louisian.

"Good luck, old man," he shouted. "I'll see you in Paris."

Lindbergh only grinned. He waved thousands of watchers on the field, who were held back by heavy police detachments, at the silver colored plane, glinting in the faint sun which shone through a fast

AMERICAN VESSELS REQUESTED TO KEEP LOOKOUT FOR FLYER

Shipping Lines Are Dotted With Ships Board
Says

WASHINGTON, May 20.—News that Charles Lindbergh, the lone wolf among the trans-ocean flyers, was at last on his way to Paris on a non-stop flight thrilled official Washington today to a state of watchful expectancy and co-operation.

The Atlantic shipping lanes are dotted with U. S. shipping board vessels, and instructions immediately were issued for all ships to maintain a lookout for the daring young pilot and render assistance if any is needed. Similar orders have been issued to navy vessels, although most navy ships are off Newport engaged in the annual maneuvers.

Shipping board vessels of one type or another are scattered across the Atlantic approximately every sixty miles, according to shipping board officials.

If the weather in mid-ocean is clear this fact would afford a considerable measure of safety, but if the weather is foggy or Lindbergh should be forced down at night his rescue would be largely a hit-or-miss affair.

Instructions were broadcast today to all coast guard vessels on iceberg patrol to watch for Lindbergh.

At 10 o'clock this morning, Admiral Eberle, chief of naval operations, broadcast the following message to all navy ships in the Atlantic:

"Pilot Lindbergh in land plane 'Spirit of St. Louis,' single engine monoplane, departed on Great Circle course for Land's End, England, and Paris, at 6:52 a. m. New York time. Plane not equipped with radio. Request any ships sighting the plane to report that fact."

Naval flying experts were loud in their praise of Lindbergh's daring, but they were frankly pessimistic over his chances for success.

Lindbergh was on his way, however, and nothing was going to prevent him from continuing. The silver monoplane bumped along, bouncing on the muddy runway as it picked up, and it was almost a mile down the field that it finally got into the air.

A few moments later nothing was left, the plane having swiftly sped into the mists, straight out toward Montauk Point and the long lonely miles of the Atlantic.

For a few minutes the roar of the engine could be heard, and then there was nothing. "Daredevil" Lindbergh was truly on his way.

"The kid" attained a speed that other aviators described as "phenomenal" soon after taking off. One of the newspaper planes capable of traveling 105 miles an hour was soon left far behind. Even before leaving the ground Lindbergh accelerated his engine to an unusual degree, and "bumped" on the muddy field several times before finally taking to the air.

EX-JURIST DIES

SPRINGFIELD, O., May 20.—Funeral arrangements were being made here today for Judge A. N. Summers, 71, former chief justice of the Ohio Supreme Court, and one of the state's leading barristers, who succumbed to a prolonged illness at his home here yesterday. Judge Summers was on the supreme bench for two terms, retiring in 1911, and was chief justice during one year. His widow and three children survive.

GAMBLING FEVER SWEEPS PARIS AS LAW FORBIDS GAMES OF CHANCE IN CAPITAL

By BASIL WOON
Author of "The Paris That's Not in the Guide Books."

PARIS, May 20.—A fever for gambling is sweeping Paris. Public gambling is forbidden within 100 kilometers of Paris. But as usual the professionals in this particular vice have managed to elude the law.

Before gambling was "forbidden" there was but one recognized place of chance and that was in Paris. Itself, but twelve miles away at Enghien.

Since the war there has been no Enghien, but in its place there are some 500 "salons," "musicals," "cassinos," and "snorting" clubs where chameleon-like the one variable game is played from 2 in the afternoon until dawn.

Some of these clubs are disreputable in the extreme, crowded with assassins, burglars, white slaves, pickpockets, fences and all that motley crowd that flourishes on vice. Others are surrounded with the aura of respectability.

One must be a "gentleman" to have the privilege of being fleeced in several pompous establishments.

Costly to Be Robbed.
A few of these places are really hedged about with rules, regulations, nominating committees and other barriers to the mob. You must be proposed, seconded and elected.

But in any of the other clubs you can be a "member" merely by looking prosperous and expressing a desire to be robbed. And paying the entrance fee—which varies from 75 cents to $5.

Accompanied by a friend who knows the underworld, I made a round of the gaming clubs last night. Altogether, we visited eleven clubs. In only one of them was admittance difficult, and that because my friend was taken for a man who had once created a disturbance.

If there's one man they hate in a gambling club it's the foolish fellow who squeals after they have got his money.

Shearing Places for American Lambs

So-called American Paris, centering around the Rue de la Paix and the Rue Daunou, has several ornate establishments in which a sucker can bet any amount from 20 francs to a million.

Best-known of these is the great Hausmann club, founded and owned by Monsieur Andre, the man who took Eugene Cornuche's place as director of Deauville, who built and owns La Baule, the beautiful Brittany resort, and who is now recognized king of the gambling world.

The Hausmann club is on the Rue Michodiere. A footman in plush stands at the door, before which cluster the limousines of the human vacuum cleaners in the rooms above.

Higher play goes on in the Hausmann club than in any private club in the world, including even Bradley's. There is one table where the Greek-Armenian-Levantine syndicate owns shares in many gambling houses—but only whispered, for in France the "house" is not allowed to back the game.

There is no reason why the house should back the game. The house gets 5 per cent from two out of every three deals—and a deal takes an average of forty seconds. Out of the 5 per cent the house pays a government tax of approximately 75 per cent, which explains better than I could why these places are allowed to run.

"Banco!"
The Greeks were backing the game at the big table last night. As we sauntered over I heard the toneless monologue of the croupier:

"Six thousand louis in the bank....Make your plays, gentlemen....Rien ne va plus—"

A swarthy man with thick lips and a diamond-studded watch-chain standing near us, called sharply.

"Banco!"
"The banco is made," said the croupier. "Withdraw your bets. An eight! There are 11,400 louis in the bank...."

A louis is 75 cents.

An American "Square Shooter."
In the very short block between the Avenue de l'Opera and the Rue de la Paix there is the New York bar, Ciro's, Philippe's, an American shoe store, the Daumon theater and the Daumon club.

The Daumon club is a gambling club run by an American, Paul Farrell, a former gentleman boxer well known in New York.

Farrell's place is run on different lines from the other clubs. Professional sharps are not allowed in the games. Farrell, himself, is of the old tradition of gambling house keepers, a "square shooter."

Food Is Cheap.

On the corner of the Rue de la Paix is the Red Star club, sponsored by Henri Pate, a former minister. On the rue Volney are two clubs, one dedicated to fencing and the other to the arts, where bacarat is played daily. These last two clubs are old-established and have strict membership rules.

Just around the corner on the boulevard des Capucines, opposite the Serbie hotel and the new office of the International Sleeping Car Co., is the Capucines club, one of the largest in the city. Opposite Jack Bushy's place on the Rue Caumartin, in what was formerly the famous Oscar Mouvet night establishment is a club which specializes in professional billiards as well as cards.

The Faubourg Montmartre has three clubs within fifty yards of each other. Underneath the Marius theater, nearest boulevard movie house, is the Cercle Hippique, most lavishly installed of all the clubs. A block away is the Cercle des Courses, which has no more to do with horseracing, despite its name, than the Cercle Hippique.

Some of these clubs serve free meals to players. In nearly all excellent food can be had at minimum cost—first cost.

The Thesplan Element.

The racing season has opened in lovely spring weather and the usual freaks are with us.

Maud Loty, actress, whose eyes are so big they seem to take up half of her face, wore a checker-board tailor-made—remarkable because the skirt was so short there was room only for three checks.

Helene Berthon, mamequin, introduced the skirt-clip, a jeweled contrivance not unlike an ordinary bicycle trouser clip. For use in a wind with knee-length skirts.

Something New.

Rose Damour had a rose tattooed on her left shoulder. Gilberte LeMaitre wore a tall hat of crumpled felt, bent forward in a figure 8 look.

Jane Danjon, star, launched her own creation, the "fifty-fifty robe." This is cut in halves lengthwise, and is put on sideways instead of over the head. Each half overlaps the other a few inches and the whole is fastened by two buttons. "Makes walking and undressing easier," explained the bewitching Jane.

BIBLE THOUGHT

MY HELP:—I am poor and needy; yet the Lord thinketh upon me; thou art my help and my deliverer; make no tarrying, O my God. Psalm 40:17.

"HANG ON TOO LONG"

The increased length of life is said to be worrying official Germany. It is feared the old age pensioners will become so numerous there will not be enough money to pay the pensions. The law provides a pension for all officials over sixty-five years, but recently the remarkable increase in the span of life has brought about a great increase in the number of pensioners.

It is claimed the German habit of taking a nap after dinner has helped to prolong life. This increase in the span of human life is not peculiar to Germany. It is general for the civilized nations. After-dinner naps may be responsible for it in Germany, but better living conditions and more intelligent attention to health and diet are responsible for most of it.

Some people are apprehensive that the increased span will result in so great an increase in population living at one time that there will not be enough food raised to feed them, but nature seems to have a way of adjusting matters of that kind, so why worry about that? The U. S. does not pension its old people, so we have no cause to worry on that account, although England might join Germany on that score.

PREDICTING THE FUTURE

That curious mental germ which impels people to cross every conceivable bridge before they come to it seems to seize an unfair proportion of its victims from among scientists.

Professor Albrecht Penck, world-famous authority on the ice ages, predicts that in 2227 A. D. the earth will have a population of eight billion and that famine will be continuous.

He may be right; he may be wrong. Certainly, not even a scientist can be sure. To carry forward through three centuries of unknown future computations based on the world's present food supply and consumption, soil area and methods of agriculture is enormously to overstep one's data.

Three centuries ago scientists predicted famines in the twentieth century. Except in time of war this century has been troubled more by food surpluses than by food shortages.

Transportation is now incomparably more rapid than was then foreseen. Food storage on a scale then undreamt of is now a fact. It is now possible to preserve foods for years by refrigeration and canning. Furthermore, new foods are being found and invented; crop yields per acre are increasing through use of fertilizers, scientific breeding and better cultivation, and the area of arable land is being increased.

The only safe prediction about the future of man is that no limit dare be set to what he and nature may do, independently and in co-operation. Within the next three hundred years man may be extracting his food directly from the sunlight or be waxing fat from canned atmosphere.

GETTING NEW IDEAS

A Chicago teacher of reading, Dr. Brunson, discovered in an investigation in Philadelphia, that only one out of seven people who were riding on the elevated cars at 5 a. m. was reading a newspaper. But at 8:15 a. m. six out of seven people were reading. As the 8:15 jobs would be considered on the whole more desirable than the 5 o'clock ones, it suggests that reading has a great deal to do with people's advance in life.

If people want to get ahead and secure advantages in the world, they have to read about what is going on. Ideas by which men and women can climb higher can be found in any newspaper.

Russian reds must be getting rather blue, with North and South China both kicking them out.

Formerly people felt a desire to get on in the world, but now the idea seems to be to get by.

How to Achieve Beauty

BLEACHES FOR THE NECK

I cannot leave the subject of the neck without taking into consideration its color. The neck seems to day, because most of the colored have a way of getting yellow and furs contain dyes and the constant discolored more than any other part of the anatomy, and many a woman who has a nice clear, white skin on her face, and whose hands are comely, has skin on her neck that looks like time-worn ivory.

Somewhere the skin on the neck seems to possess a stubbornness about responding to the effects of bleaches, there, for the best way to keep ahead is to wear allegiance to the consistent use of bleaching creams. Almond meal put on with warm water and scrubbed well into the skin of the neck with a brush that is not too stiff will have whitening effects, even on a neck that has become quite sallow.

You can also make a paste of almond meal by mixing it with witch hazel for bleaching purposes. Apply it to the neck, leave it on for about ten minutes, and then wash off with warm water.

Just now, when necks are emerging from fur collars, the majority of women will need to give heed to the suggestions I am making to-day, because most of the colored have a way of getting yellow and furs contain dyes and the constant discolored more than any other part of the anatomy, and many a woman who has a nice clear, white skin on her face, and whose hands are comely, has skin on her neck that looks like time-worn ivory.

A Constant Menace

KELLYGRAMS

By FRED C. KELLY

WHEN A MAN IS HONORED

In Washington, not long ago, I met an old acquaintance who had just been appointed to an important public office. His desk was banked with flowers and he was busy opening great stacks of congratulatory letters.

To all appearances he had arrived somewhere and was entitled to strut a little. When we were all alone, I asked him: "How does it feel suddenly to become a person of importance?"

"You may be surprised to know," he replied, solemnly, "that this is about the most tragic day of my life."

I looked at him closely and saw that he meant exactly what he said. Of course I asked him to explain.

"What does all this mean?" he asked, disgustedly, with an inclusive wave of his hand at the spacious office, mahogany furniture, and expensive fixtures. "It means simply that I have been thrown off like a chunk of clay from the wheel of fortune and happened to alight at this spot. Here is an office that I had nothing to do with creating. I was appointed, not so much as a tribute to my ability in the line that will be required here, as because I chanced to be a friend of a politician who thought he was doing me a favor. If it were a little factory that I had built up from nothing and this were the main office I might feel proud. If this were the day on which I had succeeded in having published a book of poems—or in painting a good picture—anything at all, so long as it were creative—I might be elated. But all this fuss being made over me because I have taken a public office in which I feel scant interest—bahi!"

And he was almost in tears. Then it dawned on me that there was a dramatic explanation of why so few office holders ever amount to much.

Too often a public office is a landing place for a misfit. Such ability as he has lay in the line of getting himself elected rather in accomplishing much afterward.

I remember a man in my native country who inherited a prosperous big farm. Because of his commanding lack of business sense, he ran through with his money in a few years and his farm passed into other hands.

But he was an agreeable fellow.

For the skin that is becoming lined as well as sallow, rub in frequently a good anti-wrinkle nourishing cream. If the lines are really deep, take the flesh between two fingers of one hand, stretching it slightly, and rub across it lightly with the fingers of the other hand, very much in the manner that you try to take the wrinkles out of tissue paper. If the wrinkles are the result of loss of flesh, massage the neck with lanoline or with cocoa butter that has been warmed.

If your neck has been badly neglected and allowed to yellow to a considerable degree I would suggest that you compound the following cream and apply it to your neck night and morning until you begin to see an improvement. This makes a good massage and bleaching cream that is both nourishing and astringent:

Glycerine, 2 1/2 ounces.
Mutton tallow, 1/2 pound.
Essence of benzoin, 1 dram.
Spirits of camphor, 1/2 dram.
Orange flower water, 1/2 dram.
Russian singlass, 1 ounce.

SONGS of a HOUSEWIFE

By Marjorie K. Rawlings

BUSY HOUSEHOLD

FROM my back window I can see, Against a patch of sunny sky, A bird's nest in an apple tree, With busy robins flashing by.

And as I cook and wash and bake, And iron and sew and mend the clothes, Many a curious look I take To see how their housekeeping goes.

Sunrise to sunset, on the wing! Nesting and nursing all day long, With only time to stop and sing At twilight, an unhurried song.

When to impatience I incline, I smile, to think that there can be A household busier than mine— A bird's nest in an apple tree!

CLOSING STATE LIBRARY

Miss Mildred W. Sandoe, Greene County District Librarian, has submitted the following letter in regard to the closing of the Ohio State Library at Columbus. People interested in the library over the state are fighting the move. The action would mean Greene County District Library being deprived of any state aid and the local library would be unable to furnish a great deal of service to local patrons afforded now.

To Whom It May Concern: Do you think the Ohio State Library should be closed "for the sake of economy?"

Do you think it wise to economize on one of the most useful tools the state possesses for education, the only tool for adult education? On which many teachers and others depend for their correspondence school college credits? Which helps farmers, farm bureaus, mechanics and artisans of all classes? Which serves communities too isolated to have libraries of their own?

Do you know that many schools in the state have inadequate libraries of their own and have to depend upon the state traveling libraries for the books which are necessary to carry on their work? Do you know that these schools will drop from first to second grade in rating if they are denied the help of the State Library? Is this fair to the children of Ohio?

Unless the people of Ohio take immediate action before the 31st day of May when the legislature will convene for formal adjournment, the State Library is to be closed in July for an indefinite time. It is necessary that EVERY PERSON who wishes to see the State Library continue its work shall write immediately to the men whose names and addresses appear below, expressing his or her disapproval of this political move and urging that the State Library be kept open under its present trained librarian and trained staff.

DO NOT DELAY. For the best interests of Ohio, write at once. The principle of democratic government is threatened by such a measure as this, the striking at the highest educational department of the state. Will you help to prove democracy a success by giving your signature against such a blow to the education which is the foundation of democracy.

These are the men who can save the State Library for you: Mr. C. C. Gray, Cadiz, Ohio. Mr. C. C. Bolton, 1552 Hanna Boulevard, Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. Martin S. Dodd, 636 Stratford Place, Toledo. Mr. Williamson. Mr. Marshall.

HALITOSIS? KILL IT!

Seven times in ten, Halitosis is due to a sour, gassy stomach, caused by intestinal stasis, or "Constipation." People with halitosis (unpleasant breath) are shunned, avoided, because they are like a "plague"—friends just can't endure being near such a person. Old and young, rich and poor, none escape if fermented food remains in the body more than 24 hours. Even if the bowels move daily, there is often a remainder of foul, decaying matter, that can only be removed with a thorough cleansing, such as Black-burn's Catho-Royal Pills produce. This sweet little pill is "Better than Castor Oil." Its action is pleasant and prompt. Stomach, liver, spleen and intestines, all are benefited. The effect is so different from ordinary laxatives, salts, calomel, etc. A smooth, abundant action from the very first dose, soon rid you of all the disagreeable symptoms. Let the whole family learn the value of Blackburn's Catho-Royal Pills, 45 pills, 30 cts. at drug stores.

Keeping HEALTHY

by Dr. A. F. Currier

ICHTHYOSIS
A. C. E.: Will any modern method of treatment check or relieve Ichthyosis?
This peculiar disease derives its name from the scale-like formation of the cells of the outer layer of the skin and is due to an inherited tendency to the formation of these cells or scales in great abundance. They seem almost like a coat of mail, and when the slightest friction is used they are shed in great quantities like the scales of a dandruff which fall from the scalp in eczema.

The skin in ichthyosis is wrinkled, harsh and dry, but in the less developed cases only its furrows and folds are thickened and scaly. These scales are dark green in color, suggesting the skin of a fish or a snake. When the disease is well developed the slightest motion causes a clattering and rattling which is necessarily very mortifying to the person who is thus afflicted.

In addition to the furrows and folds of the skin, this condition may involve the joints and exterior surface of the body, even the entire body, though the palms of the hands, the soles of the feet, and the face are not often attacked.

It may be inherited by either males or females, and is said to be aggravated by hard physical labor. It is uncommon in this country, and there are probably many dermatologists who have never seen a case of it; but in some countries it is quite prevalent.

Paraguay and the East Indian Islands are mentioned as places where it is not uncommon. It may develop during fetal life, and I recall that the one case which I have ever seen was that of a new-born baby dead at birth.

But it may develop in the first or second year of life, reaching its maximum with the arrival of puberty and then remaining stationary.

Recovery from this disease is rare, if indeed it ever occurs, though it appears to have very little influence upon the general health.

As might be expected, motion on the part of those who have ichthyosis is restricted and painful and troublesome fissures form at the folds of the skin which it is difficult to cure.

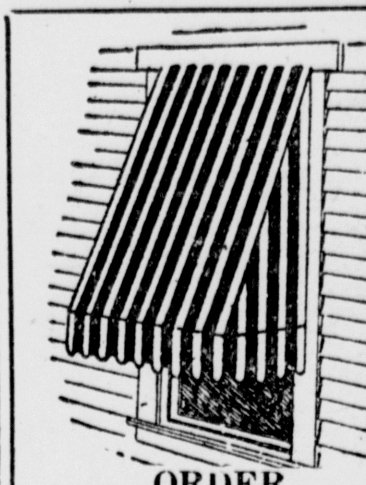

About the only thing that can be done is to remove the scales

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Reader—Am 48 and have had bile of the liver for about a year, with intense pain in the back and side. A doctor has given me several kinds of medicine, without any benefit. Your advice would be appreciated.

Answer—Judging from your letter I should think you had appendicitis or gall-stones and possibly both. At any rate it is not a matter that you can afford to tamper with and my earnest advice is that you consult a good surgeon and if he tells you an operation is necessary to have it performed.

Ask Dr. Currier that medical question that has been puzzling you. Confine your letter to fifty words and send stamped, addressed envelope for reply. He cannot, of course, make individual diagnoses, and he reserves the right to decide as to the propriety of queries.

"WE'LL LAUGH THAT OFF" SAYS EMMA AS ANGRY REAL ESTATE OPERATOR ATTACKS SORORITY

By FREDERICK EDWARDS
There are smiles that make us happy.
There are smiles that make us blue.

Not-so-very-old song.
Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright, 1927
EMPHORIA, Kan., May 20.—This may be William Allen White's home town, but Emma Jensen lives here too; and, at the moment the simple philosophy of Emma Jensen is being more spoken of in the market places than the profounder sonorities of Emporia's pet sage. I don't think that Emma Jensen favored the saying, "The voice with the smile wins," but at least she believes in it. She believes that a policy of smiling sweetly to the face of militant adversity will make the T. B. Godsey into a real nice neighbor for the Alpha Sigma Alpha sorority of the State Teachers' college.

It is my personal conviction that greater faith hath no woman than this.

T. B. Godsey is a realtor. He owns his own home, which is quite proper. Realtors, as well as other people, should practice what they preach.

Next door to T. B. Godsey's home is a large, nice house which is owned by the Alpha Sigma Alpha. It has rooms and porches, and everything. Quite a number of the Alpha Sigma Alphas live there, and Emma Jensen is their president.

Search of the records reveals no indication that T. B. Godsey is a woman hater. Probably he isn't. Miss Jensen adheres in stalwart persistence to the belief that T. B. Godsey, beneath his rough exterior, has a heart of gold. Some of the other members of the Alpha Sigma Alpha are not so sure. Re-calibrated experiments have been known to refer to T. B. Godsey as an old man.

Mr. Godsey advertises. It started last fall. Out of a clear sky, with no warning at all, there appeared an advertisement in William Allen White's Emporia Gazette over T. B. Godsey's business signature.

At first sight this was just another realtor's announcement of desirable properties to be had for a mere song. For $5,000 you could get six rooms, modern, $5,500 buys a well-built eight-room house, and so on.

But, sprang in the middle of T. B. Godsey's announcement, duly paid by his advertising appropriation, was this paragraph:

"Wonder why? A bunch of honking, screaming, hugging, kissing, dancing, irresponsible kids buy a house in any part of town, call it a sorority or frat, hire a housemother (whatever that is), who generally sleeps in a corner, and get by without paying a cent of taxes, why?"

There was consternation among the Alpha Sigma Alphas when that acid announcement appeared, let me tell you. Red fire was burned and war dances were pirouetted. Words were spoken. Harsh words. Alpha Sigma Alpha was all upset.

Honking!!
Screaming!!
Hugging!!

MISS JENSEN'S SMILE IS WELL WORTH WHILE; THE PICTURE PROVES THAT'S TRUE IF SHE WERE GLAD, WHEN YOU WERE MAD, WHAT WOULD THERE BE TO DO?

Kissin!!
"Is that all?" asked Alpha Sigma Alpha. And Alpha Sigma Alpha answered, "No!"

Oil is Poured.
But the beautiful look at the picture! Miss Jensen poured oil on the troubled waters. She's one of State Teachers' college's best oil pourers. She can pour more oil than John D. Rockefeller owns.

Of course the advertisement was aimed at Alpha Sigma Alpha, right next door to T. B. Godsey's home. "What of it?" asked Miss Jensen. "Let us forgive T. B. Godsey his wickedness and his heart will be softened and his disposition made sweet."

But it wasn't the next thing anyone knew T. B. Godsey had pounded a lot of stakes into the driveway between his house and happy medium when it comes to eggs. Hens are extremists, that's all there is to it.

Harsh Words, Neighbor.
Then just a few nights ago, while Alpha Sigma Alpha member Helen Hammond was saying "Goodnight" to Clayton Traylor, a college of Emporia senior who had escorted her home from the movies, T. B. Godsey went berserk again. He told Helen Hammond and Clayton Traylor to go away. Helen and Clayton were on the rear porch of the sorority house, when T. B. Godsey told them to go away. He told them several times and didn't repeat himself once.

Clayton Traylor is a man of spirit. He went to the police and charged T. B. Godsey with disturbing the peace, using bad language, and threatening him with a revolver.

"Peace!" said T. B. Godsey. "Peace! My painted, red-headed aunt's sacred blue Egyptian pussy-cat's waving, busy tail! Peace! There hasn't been as much peace as you could put in a mosquito's right eye since these honking, screaming, hugging, kissing girls moved in here."

Well, a charge is a charge, and things looked sort of bad. You know how it is. People will talk. Then President Emma Jensen galloped into action. She was armed with her best smile. This was a very nice smile, indeed; high powered and fully equipped (see picture).

Miss Jensen Smiles.
Miss Jensen smiled on Mr. Traylor. Mr. Traylor smiled right back, and said, "Aw, shucks, Emma. What's the use?"

The case against T. B. Godsey was not pressed. It died of prosecutory anaemia, which is a disease effecting court actions, due to the lack of sufficient vindictiveness in the blood.

Emma Jensen, as president of the Alpha Sigma Alpha sorority, issued a statement to the reporting press. She said: "We are going to be neighborly neighbors to Mr. Godsey."

"Everything will be quiet in the sorority house after 9 o'clock, so Mr. Godsey can get his sleep. "Even if we have been disagreeable neighbors to Mr. Godsey, we're going to try awful hard to make him like us all."

"Even if he did throw eggs at us, and say mean things in his advertisements, we're not made at him. We really believe he's an old man."

"We're just going to smile at his frowns until he smiles back."

When interviewed, T. B. Godsey said: "Huh! Is 'THAT' so?"

"Huh! Is 'THAT' so?"

"Huh! Is 'THAT' so?"

We Deliver Your Order Of Three Dollars

Have you ever made good on one job... for 39 years?

THE extra mileage you get from Dunlop tires starts with the fact that Dunlop has had thirty-nine years of tire-building experience—more than any other tire-maker.

Each part of each Dunlop is built right. Dunlop owns its own cotton mills to spin selected long-fibre cotton into the special Dunlop cable-twist cords.

These cords mean extra strength—an added factor of safety against constant load and pounding of roads—longer life and greater mileage.

They mean extra "stretch"—so the tire carcass will give under blows, and come back to its original shape without the slightest injury.

Every Dunlop you buy has extra miles built into it because Dunlop knows each part of its job. That is why we recommend you put Dunlops on your car.

CHAPTER LXIV

HALF-WAY TO HILLSBORO Peter spoke for the first time since they had left Aunt Agony's house. But first was passing a "horbocow" restaurant. It's steam-covered windows were bright gold against the night, and a burst of music came from its door as someone stepped out into the darkness.

"Want to stop for a cup of coffee?" Peter asked, shortly, and began to slow down on his speed.

Sylvia shook her head. "No—just let's keep going," she answered.

They kept on going. They went like the wind down between the walls of darkness that edged the road. They ate up the miles.

But, fast as they went, every mile seemed like ten to Sylvia.

It seemed to her that she never would reach Ranny. Her fear for him made every moment torment.

When the twinkling lights of the town came into sight at last, she gave a long half-sobbing breath of relief. Only a few minutes now—only a few minutes.

As the car jolted into the main street she turned to the man beside her and laid her gloved fingers on his arm for the first time since they had left.

"I haven't any money with me," she began. But she didn't need to finish her sentence, for almost instantly she felt Peter's leather bill fold in her hands.

"There's not much in it," he said, gruffly, staring straight ahead of him at the dark street, "but I guess they'll cash a check for me at the hospital. Don't worry. I'll fix everything up. Let's see, the paper said the injured hadn't been taken to Hope hospital, didn't it? I think it's down this street."

He spoke in an ordinary tone. It brightened Sylvia up, just to hear the sound of his voice. It seemed impossible that Ranny should die while Peter was so matter-of-fact about him.

"They've done everything possible for Ranny, I know," he went on, in his deep, comforting voice. "But I'm sure you'll feel better about him if old Dr. Buzzard has a look at him, won't you?"

Sylvia nodded silently. She thought there was no actor in the world to compare with the old doctor who had taken care of the Starr family for two generations.

"All right, I'll telephone for him while you're at the hospital," said Peter. "And I'll take a room for you at some hotel or other, up here. I suppose you'll want to stay here all night, won't you?"

Again Sylvia nodded. Nothing would induce her to leave the little town until it was settled whether Ranny was going to live or die, and Sylvia looked up at her with her haunted eyes. "He's dead, isn't he?" she asked. "That's why you won't let me touch him?"

The nurse shook her head with its pitying smile as she looked down at the girl beside the bed. She had lived with death and sickness so many years that she had grown used to the horror of them, as nurses have to grow used to it.

"Of course, he's not dead. He wouldn't be here if he were dead," she answered in a low tone. "You'd better come now."

Obediently Sylvia rose and leaned over the still figure on the bed. As she bent toward it, the smell of acetone came to her and made her faint and dizzy.

"Promise me you won't die," she whispered, and it seemed as if Ranny must hear her, even in the fog of his ether-dream, so intense was that whispered plea. Promise me you won't die—

Then she felt herself being drawn away from him. "Really, you mustn't do this," the nurse said in her low, firm voice. "He can't possibly hear you, Mrs. Phelps, anyway."

She put her arm around Sylvia's shoulders and led her out of the ward.

Outside Peter was talking to another nurse—a large, middle-aged one who looked like Mother Phelps.

"I'm making arrangements to have Ranny put into a private room," he said to Sylvia, and immediately the black cloud of despair lifted from her soul. If Ranny were going to be moved into another room, it meant that he wasn't going to die immediately, at any rate.

There must still be a chance for him. A fighting chance.

Afterward, as she and Peter went out into the chilly night, she began to ask him questions about Ranny—questions that she had been too dazed to ask the nurse while she was in the hospital.

"He has a fractured skull, and he's pretty well smashed up, I guess. But there's still hope for him," Peter answered her questions in that matter-of-fact voice of his. "He'll pull through, you'll see. He's always been as strong as an ox."

He seemed to muse a little. Then he spoke again.

"They said that Miss Delano died on her way to the hospital," he said.

(TO BE CONTINUED)

PROMISE ME YOU WON'T DIE," SHE CRIED. BUT THERE WAS NO ANSWER

ENGLISH FLYERS ON NON-STOP FLIGHT

LONDON, May 20—A 4,000 mile non-stop flight to Karachi, India, started at 10:42 o'clock today when Lieut. C. R. Carr and Lieut. L. Gillman hopped off at Cranwell air-plane.

The aeroplane carried 8,000 pounds of gasoline. The total weight of the plane itself is 1450 pounds and the engines are estimated as 700 horse-power. The plane will have to remain in the air forty-two hours to reach India.

Rheumatism

Get this relief at once. German and American science has produced such relief as this brings quick, safe, amazing benefits.

This is one of many who have been helped. "I certainly can recommend Su-thol Tablets for rheumatism, as I suffered for weeks before taking them. I had electric treatment for two months and finally got so bad was not able to walk at all. I took one box of Su-thol and my rheumatism was gone. Also took your Casca-Royal Pills to regulate the bowels. Have never felt so well in my life and I recommended your medicines to my friends. Truly yours, Mrs. Josephine Howard, 222 Blandina St., Utica, N. Y."

The cost is trivial, the results assured. Six 250 tubes in each $1.00 package at leading drug stores.

The Rovin' Ritzies By Flo Frederick

How Betty Strings a Bead Is Advice That You Should Heed.
Betty Ann, the youngest member of the Ritzie club, had discovered a way to make rings and bracelets stay on her doll's fingers and wrists.

There were times when the girl members of the Ritzie club played with their dolls while the boys indulged in rougher games, and dashed about the yard on imaginary horses, flashing crude swords at each other. It would not have been hard to guess that they were the daring knights of old and that their shields were tin lids and ash can tops.

The girls were dressing their dolls when Betty Ann worked out the problem of jewelry. She is sure that many little girls would be glad to know how it can be done.

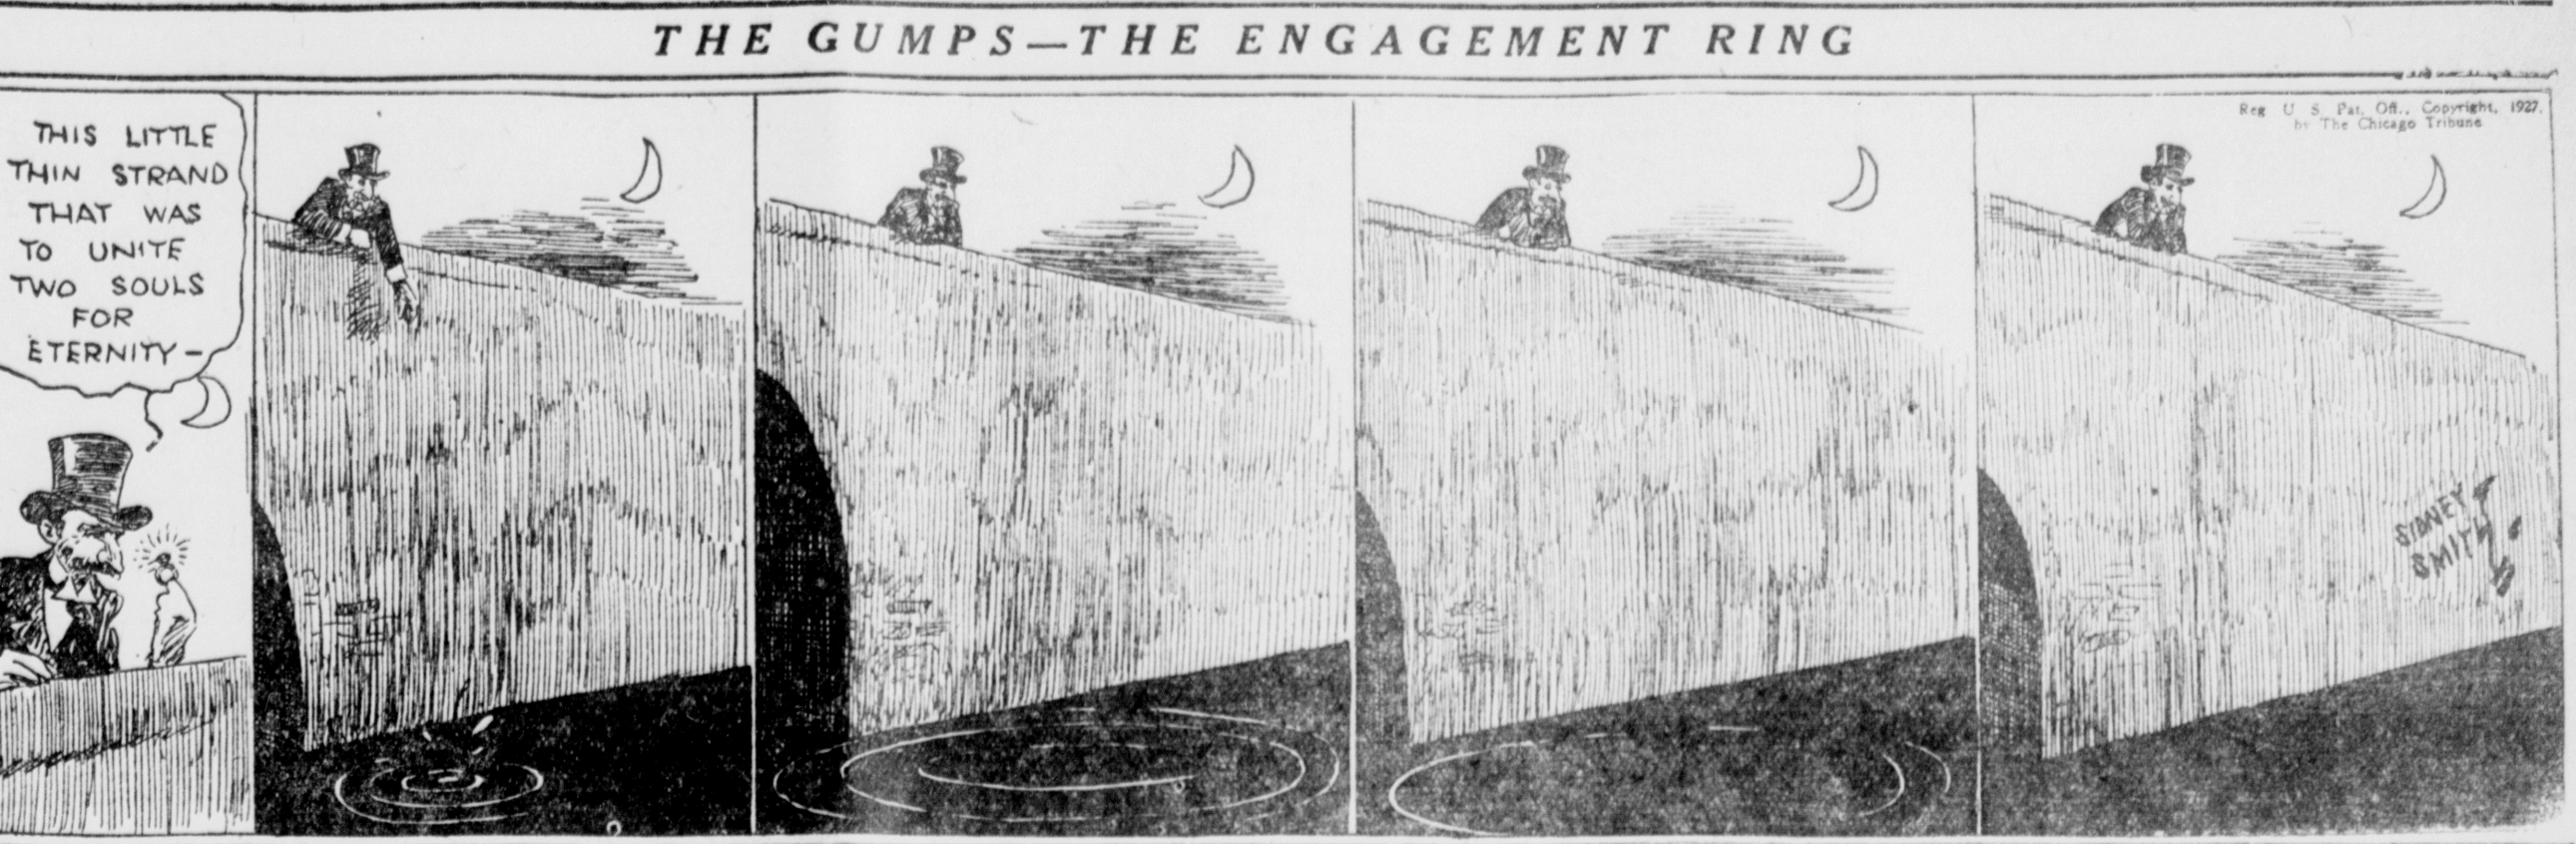

If you wish to make a pearl ring for your doll, slip a piece of wire through a pearl bead and twist the wire around the doll's finger so that the pearl stays on the outside. A jade bracelet of green beads can be made in the same way and twisted securely around your doll's wrist.

This is much more satisfactory than stringing the beads on thread because when wired they can be taken on and off so easily and, of course, if your doll is a lady of fashion she will have many rings and bracelets.

In selecting your wire, you must be sure that it is fine and easy to bend. If there isn't any in the ol chest, mother will very likely let you a fold of the green wire that is used in making paper flowers. This can be cut with an old known in Washington, where he was ambassador during the World War, and at Tokio is looked upon as an uncommonly shrewd international negotiator. Mr. Saburi, the secretary-general and virtually the third Japanese delegate, will bring to Geneva the valuable experience of service during the Washington armament conference and several subsequent years as counselor of the Japanese embassy here to contribute Japan's full share.

Staff Numbers More Than Fifty

Japan is dispatching to Geneva a conference staff no less impressive numerically than for the standpoint of ability. Messrs. Saito, Ishii and Saburi will head a delegation of more than fifty naval and military officers and diplomatic experts, including several admirals. Saito is unmistakably preparing, as it prepared at Washington five years ago, to defend Japan's right, because of her insular position in the Pacific and her interests on the mainland of Asia, to remain powerful at sea. Her claims will be based on what she believes to be certain irreducible defensive necessities. She will proclaim her deto the maintenance of world peace, but always with the frank assertion of the empire's military and naval requirements.

The Japanese "defense budget" for 1926 totaled $220,000,000. A little more than half was spent on the navy. Japanese taxes, as elsewhere, are burdensome. The government is constantly endeavoring to cut expenses and devote more money to constructive things. Recent Japanese financial disturbances have whetted statesmen's anxiety in those directions. But particularly under the new government now in power, with Baron Tanaka, a former general, as prime minister, defensive needs are assured of determined support, although Tanaka is not charged with militaristic tendencies.

Reluctant to Reduce

Semi-official Japanese utterances since the President Coolidge brought about the Geneva conference, have strongly indicated Japan's reluctance to reduce materially her present building program for the cruisers, destroyers and submarines. Having accepted capitulation inferiority to Great Britain and the United States, the Japanese are plainly disinclined to remain weaker in auxiliary ships. Responsible Japanese newspapers already are demanding that the Geneva conference place Japan and the United States on a level of equality in non-capital ships. They are calling for a 2-4-4 ratio, with Great Britain allowed the corresponding margin of superiority owing to her globe-girdling imperial naval needs.

Some idea of the Japanese reasoning now in progress is afforded by the following editorial comment from the important "Osaka Mainichi," which has just reached Washington:

U. S. Demands Attacked

"The implied intention of the United States is to apply the 5-5-3 capital ship ratio to subsidiary weapons. Japan and Great Britain object to this, unanimously insisting upon making the existing strength of their fleets their standards of national defense. For this reason it becomes necessary to work out a new ratio through adjustment of differences. The United States claims she should be allotted the same cruiser strength as the British, but this is not fair, because the British own vast possessions overseas. The coast lines of the United States are not so extensive as those of the British empire. We hold that the United States should be allowed cruisers in the ratio of only four as against five for Great Britain. This is an appropriate proportion. Japan is an island empire like the British Empire. We therefore claim the right to have cruiser strength on a scale of four to America's four. The new tripartite ratio as between Great Britain, Japan and the United States should be respectively, 5-4-4. If such a ratio is put in force, Great Britain and Japan will have to strike certain units from their lists, whereas the United States will be permitted to add 35,000 tons of new ships to her navy. This suggestion will likely afford a basis for a compromise at Geneva."

Franco-Italian Attitude

The Japanese are disturbed over the failure of France and Italy to join in the Geneva conference. They realize that if the French and Italians proceed to build cruisers and other light craft without limitation, the British would necessarily have to meet that competition. In the race thus precipitated, Japanese commentators are pointing out, their country and America sooner or later also would join. It's exactly that kind of a new and furious contest in naval armament that President Coolidge desires to avert.

Radio Law Has Wide Field

Orestes H. Caldwell, federal radio commissioner for the North Atlantic area, comes to the front with a novel idea. He suggests that the new radio law may be found to possess powers reaching far beyond its supposed jurisdiction. Addressing a church meeting in his home town at Bronxville, N. Y., the other night, Commissioner Caldwell intimated that the law dealing with radio interference might easily be construed to apply to purely local disturbances of all kinds. "If, for example," he said, "a householder here in Westchester County is listening to a radio program from New Jersey and an oil-burner in his neighbor's house starts up, ruining radio reception, that oil-burner is interfering with interstate commerce just as much as a distant radio station which was spilling the same waste length. It was to eliminate interference that the radio law was passed. Sooner or later the federal authority is going to be brought into local interference situations, including sign-flashers, heating pads, toasters, violet-ray invigorators, vacuum cleaners, and children's electric trains."

WHAT HAS HAPPENED:

Both Anne Tracy and Mr. Jones, who is the "Tracy" milkman, object to the engagement of Phillip Wynne Tracy IV and Natalie Jones.

Phillip's mother plans to interest her son in other girls and decides to give him a party. She tells him about the impending visit of her old friend, Mrs. Hilliard, and unconsciously arouses his interest in the woman. He goes to the depot to meet her and takes her to luncheon. Shocked, he finds he has fallen in love at first sight and wishes Natalie were not coming to the party.

After their first kiss, Phillip only lives to be near Lyra.

At the party Natalie overhears Phillip making love to Mrs. Hilliard and breaks her engagement. She refuses to be even friends and tells Rodney Maxwell all about it. Rodney comforts Natalie by telling her that he loves her and will smother her face, but she begs him to forgive Phil and stay friends with him through everything.

On a midnight ride Lyra confesses her love for Phillip.

The next day Phillip tells his mother that he is not going to college and sends Lyra a very passionate love poem which his mother finds. Lyra and Mrs. Tracy have it out. Lyra tells Anne she is not too old for romance. The whole affair, however, sinks into nothingness because war is declared.

Here the story further unfolds—

CHAPTER XX

PHILLIP KEEPS UP THE TRADITION

IT did not strike Anne Tracy that she was sacrilegious in her prayer. She was only a very human mother with human impulses.

The impulse first to save her boy from the devastating wiles of a woman who would make his life a living hell—and second—to in some way make the war god think it was to him she was giving her only son—these were the thoughts that came to her mind.

Her head was pounding—she could not breathe—but at last, in a torrent of sobs and tears, she confessed to herself that she would rather know that Phillip was dead out there on the fields of France than realize that when asked to choose between her and Lyra he would choose Lyra.

She lifted her head. Above the ominous noise of already war-crazed men a young voice was raised high over the crowd.

"Rod—oh Rod—come on—you know we promised to sign up together."

"All right, Wynne—I am with you."

Anne Tracy rushed to the window and looked out on the street.

Through the gate of the house next door came the stolid form of Rodney Maxwell.

As he reached the car and swung himself in beside the boy at the wheel, he threw his arm around Phillip's shoulder.

"All right, Buddy," he said, "let's go."

Sharply the shining blue roadster turned and drove away.

Anne Tracy drew back quickly as the dread thought struck her. She had not for a moment thought that Phillip would enlist without first telling her.

She rushed back to the window and threw it up calling, "Phillip! Phillip!"

He did not hear her, for with honking horn and open cut-out he was racing down the street to the first recruiting station.

When she realized that he had forgotten her—that even now her anguish meant nothing to him, she felt her breath come faint.

Some time afterward her faithful Nonnie found her underneath the open window, prone on the floor.

Lyra Hilliard, from her window, had witnessed the little drama and her heart also missed a beat as she realized that she, too, was forgotten in this great thrill that made Phillip Wynne Tracy IV look the very image of the American soldier as standing straight up in the roadster, his uncovered head bared to the breeze that lifted his dark brown hair, he drove down the avenue shouting, "Come on, boys—come on! America is at last going to win and we have to follow the flag!"

The afternoon papers made much of this incident, for the greatest weapon of all was already on the firing line.

Was propaganda—thrilling appeals to one's patriotism and the intimation that only those who were yellow would stay behind.

As usual, it was Phillip who impulsively and unthinkingly forged ahead through the ruck of men milling about the street, cheering, laughing, triumphant.

It was only with the closed doors of houses all over the land and the white, tearless women moved unheeding of the country's jubilee.

Across the road from the Jones house a little figure was pressed against the old elm tree. So closely did the girl hug the trunk that it is her stray coat she looked like a part of it.

Her arms outstretched above her head were clutched, tearing at its bark.

"Rod, you are so good to me."

Every few minutes a sharp exclamation would perhaps call the attention of some one of the excited passers-by, but even he would hardly notice that it was the clinging to the tree in anguish who spoke.

"Why doesn't Rod come?" It was very significant that even in this terrible crisis Natalie Jones was depending on Rod and not upon Phillip.

Natalie knew that the excitement and thrill of declared war had brushed every other thought out of Phillip's mind. But she also was sure that Rod would remember her—he would not leave her for long without some word.

It seemed hours, but in reality the time was very short, before Rod was gently taking Natalie's arms down from above her head against the tree.

Then she burst into wild, dry sobs, that shook her whole frame.

"Rod—Phillip's going?"

"The very way she put her question showed that she expected no other answer than the bowing head which told her yes. 'We are both going, Natalie.'"

With the unconscious cruelty of a woman who is passionately in love with one man and knows that the other is in love with her, she exclaimed: "Oh, I am so glad!"

For a moment the man beside her grew white and leaned against the tree.

Natalie hurried on: "I was going to ask you, Rod, dear, to go with Phillip, but I was afraid that you still might be angry with him. I might have known that like the good friend you are, you would have thought of nothing except to be with him when danger came."

"You will take care of him, will you not? You know how thoughtless and impulsive he is. He would run into danger for the sheer thrill of it. But you will be with him, Rod, and now I know that he will be as safe as any one could be in that awful hell."

"Rod, you are so good to me," Rodney wondered, grimly if she realized what she was doing to him. For a moment he was quite contemptuous of his weakness, for he had no illusions. Natalie Jones had sacrificed him all his life for Wynne and now she was sending him probably to his death without a qualm because she thought he might save her lover from casual danger.

Then another thought struck her. "Why, it never occurred to me that neither Phil nor you are old enough to go. How did you get in, Rod?" Natalie asked, a gleam of new courage coming into her eyes. "I hope you did not lie about your age."

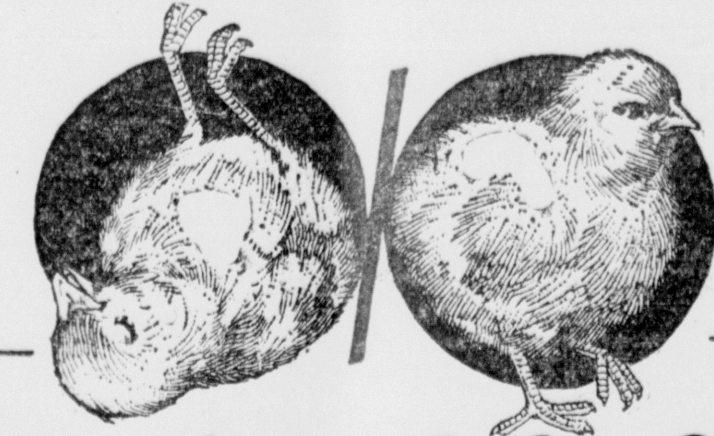

"No—Wynne is going to get his mother's consent."

"She will not give it. Surely, Rod, she cannot give it. Why, Phillip is her only child!"

"Wynne thinks she will consent, for she knows he is the only one in the family that can keep up that tradition that whenever the American flag goes into battle there will be a Tracy following it."

"I don't believe that will make any difference with her. Then, as afterthought, 'What about you, Rod?' Why, you, yourself, are only a little over 17."

Will Mrs. Tracy allow her son to enlist? Her attitude, and that of Mrs. Hilliard, are told in the next installment.
